Wheeler, Nye to Offer War Aims Bill Today

Senate Resolution Will Demand That Nations Tell Of Secret Pacts

A resolution calling on the belligerent Governments to proclaim their war aims publicly will be thrown today into the Senate battle over the President's lend-lease bill to aid England.

Senators Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, announced last night their intention to offer the measure, which would call also for publishing of any "secret treaties for disposition of territorial spoils."

Seven amendments to be proposed in House committee consideration of the bill were made public, meanwhile, by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York.

The two moves came on the eve of Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings on the aid-England bill, and the House committee's secret questioning of Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, acting chief of the Air Corps.

Fish Amendments

Following the latter executive hearing, the House committee will plunge into the task of writing the bill as it is to be reported, and the isolationists' fight to modify proposed provisions will be under way.

Fish said the amendments he contemplated offering have the following objectives:

"To prohibit the President from giving away any part of the Navy, to prohibit naval convoys for American or British ships into the war zone, to limit the value of war material loaned to Britain to $2,000,000,000, to require that Britain put up some kind of security for any such materials, to strike out provisions permitting belligerent warships to base upon or enter American ports for repairs or outfitting, to limit the life of the bill, preferably to one year, and to modify the section which repeals any provision of existing law in conflict with the proposed one."

Committee Chairman Bloom predicted that the bill would re reported favorably late this week "without substantial change." He expressed hope that it could be brought to a House vote by Friday of next week.

Say War Threat Is Near

The Senate committee will open its hearings in executive session with Secretary of State Hull appearing first. Hull then will be heard in open session, to be followed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of Navy Knox, all of whom have appeared before the House group.

Wheeler and Nye said their resolution would assert:

"It is the sense of the United States Senate that the President of the United States, through the State Department, request all belligerent governments to proclaim publicly their respective war aims and peace conditions and all secret treaties for disposition of territorial Washington's first snowfall of the winter, almost 2 inches deep by midnight, grounded all planes yesterday and caused scores of accidents on slippery, sleet-sheathed highways. Earlier, two persons were killed in a traffic mishap in nearby Maryland.

The Weather Bureau ordered northeast storm warnings south of Block Island to the Delaware breakwater last night as a disturbance over Kentucky moved eastward.

More snow, perhaps enough to delight the hearts of the Capital's children, was promised for today, along with cloudy, colder weather tonight.

Part of a wide, white swath that covered the country westward to the Dakotas to a maximum depth of 12 inches, yesterday's snowfall closed the Lee Boulevard through Arlington, Va., for two hours and led the American Automobile Association to warn motorists to avoid travel if possible.

Numerous bus schedules were disrupted, with New York trips pulling into Washington as much

Harvester Strike Ends As U. S. Acts

Production Stopped At Allis-Chalmers Milwaukee Plant

By the United Press

The 10-day-old strike of 1,400 men at the International Harvester Co.'s East Moline, Ill., plant was settled last night as Federal conciliators sought to end or avert several other tieups that have been causing concern for the national defense effort.

Members of the I. H. C. plant independent union met with members of a striking C. I. O. union and voted, 244 to 116, to return to work while a committee submits grievances to the company.

The fourth day of a strike of 7,000 members of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) saw complete shutdown of production at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. plant, Milwaukee, which had been engaged in work on $26,000,000 worth of orders for heavy defense equipment.

Msgr. Francis Haas and James P. Holmes, Federal conciliators, were seeking an accord between union and company representatives which would permit resumption of production while negotiations continue on the union's demand for higher wages. A. U. A. W. spokesman said the strikers would not return to work until the company agrees, in addition to other demands, to reimburse the strikers for pay lost by the walkout.

Conciliators had arranged conferences for an attempt to effect a truce in the strike of 3,400 C. I. O. shipbuilders at Mobile, Ala., drydocks of the Alabama Drydocks & Shipbuilding Co. The strike, called in support of demands for higher wages, has tied up ship repair work for the United States Navy and British shipping interests.

At Lansing, Mich., a strike was voted at the Atlas Drop Forge Co., which is working on plane propeller, tank and machine gun parts for the American and British governments.

Scratching the Surface

D. C. Welfare Institutions Held Improved, but Far From Model

Following a series of visits to District welfare institutions by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last year, efforts were announced to improve the management of five agencies. This is the first of a series of articles in which The Post reports what it found during a recent investigation to discover what improvements had been made.

By James D. Secrest

District welfare institutions which shocked Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt a year ago and aroused a Congressional sub-committee are still far from models, but neither are they the national disgrace that they were called a few years ago.

Thanks to the publicity turned on them by the First Lady, Congress and the Commissioners have loosened the District's purse strings slightly, and the welfare officials have taken on new life in tackling problems too long neglected.

But the improvements made to date, while valuable, have been superficial, except perhaps in the better hospitalization at the Home for the Aged and Infirm. The major reforms are "on order" and may strike obstacles at the District Building or at the Capitol.

There is a danger that an economy-bent Congressional sub-committee may resume its habit of cutting welfare appropriations as least essential. The Commissioners were more liberal this year in drawing up 1942 estimates than they have been in recent years, but they did prune rather freely after it was decided to plan for a huge welfare center.

Of course, as they pointed out, it would be wasteful for the District

Army Calls For 16,500 Air Recruits

WPA to Train 50,000 for Medical Work; A. F. L. Unit Urges 7-Day Week

The Army last night called for 16,500 volunteers for the Air Corps and related branches, as the WPA announced a home defense program for training 50,000 hospital aides "capable of giving simple bedside care."

At the same time Senate leaders sought to assure passage within the week of a series of measures further to expand the Nation's fighting and merchant ship forces.

In still another phase of the all-out defense undertaking a proposal for a seven-day week in industry came from the head of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

Instructions to recruit by March 1 the 16,500 Air Corps volunteers for three-year enlistments were sent to the nine corps area commanders in the continental United States. Men registered for selective service are eligible.

To Double Air Force

The newest recruiting campaign started a drive almost to double the strength of the Army air forces by next July, when it is hoped 10,100 officers, 15,000 flying cadets and 151,000 enlisted men will be in service. At present officers number 6,180, and there are 7,000 flying cadets and 83,000 men.

The WPA's plans to train 50,000 persons within the next 12 months as hospital ward attendants, orderlies and aides followed an assertion by Dr. Thomas Parran, United States surgeon general, that such elementary nursing services save thousands of lives in event of a widepread influenza epidemic such as occurred during the World War.

The reserve of hospital workers likewise would be available for service in any disaster.

To Request 400 Small Ships

Navy and merchant marine measures before the Senate this week include:

1. Authorization of $909,000,000 for 400 small Navy fighting ships, yards to build them, and armor plate and ordnance for them.

2. Authorization of $300,000,000 to equip 58 of the Navy's fighting ships with stronger defenses against bombing planes.

3. Appropriation of $315,000,000 for emergency construction of 200 cargo ships.

4. An increase of 651 midshipmen at the Annapolis Naval Academy, to provide additional officers for the "two-ocean" Navy. This may be acted on today.

Civil Service Clerk Held; G-Men Ask if Records Were Used For 'Sucker Lists'

Two men, questioned for several hours by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation about the removal of personnel records from offices of the Civil Service Commission, were lodged in cells at First Precinct Station shortly before midnight last night.

They were booked as Harlan G. Crandall, 29, of 45 Todd Street Northeast, an employe of the commission, and Lawrence Haynes, 30, of 403 D Street Northeast. Each handcuffed to a burly G-man when brought in, they were listed as "held for the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Sucker Lists Mentioned

An F. B. I. spokesman earlier said others "probably" were involved in an alleged plot to remove confidential personnel files and their identities were known.

Questioning sought to determine if information in the records, several thousand of which allegedly were taken from the files, were intended as a basis for "sucker lists" or for some more sinister purpose.

Records involved were personnel information sheets prepared six months ago by 600,000 Federal employes voluntarily for use of the Interdepartmental Placement Service. They contain names, addresses, names and addresses of dependents, amount of salary and character of work done, as well as special abilities which might be put to use in case of necessity.

Anyone Could Remove

The records, stored haphazardly in several buildings, persons familiar with them said last night, were not guarded or under special surveillance. They were in constant use, it was explained, and "bales" of them were removed from their storage places and returned daily.

"Almost anybody could take them out," one person said. "You could go in there yourself, without your overcoat and hat, pick up a bundle of those files and walk out with them without being challenged."

It was also pointed out that Government employes in contact with personnel records are frequently approached by commercial houses to compile mailing lists. These firms, some of which deal in such lists exclusively, usually are interested in lists of persons in specified occupations or with stated hobbies. Lists, for instance, might be desired of motorboat owners, or toolmakers, or carpenters, or employes of designated Government departments.

"They don't have any trouble getting these lists," one source said.

Mourned by the Nation's Great

Robert J. Coar, jr., and Lady

Seven-months-old Robert J. Coar, jr., said to be the only baby ever christened under the United States Capitol dome, and with more friends in Congress than perhaps any American, young or old, died of pneumonia Saturday night in Children's Hospital.

Bobby was sick but three days after seven months of perfect health. His 67 sponsors—a list including Senators Nye, Vandenberg, Mead, Andrews, Fish and Pepper and a roll call of the best-known Representatives—scarcely knew he was down with severe cold.

Lady, his pet Spaniel, however, knew the baby was down and went to the hospital with Bobby's father, who is superintendent of the House Radio Transcription Room. Just before Bobby died he made the slight, unintelligible sound he had always used to make for Lady to come up and play.

When Bobby was christened in the well of the House on October 17—four months to the day after his birth in Columbia Hospital here—the old timers of The Hill searched their minds and the records and said it never had been done before.

Representative and Mrs. Frank W. Boykin, of Alabama, were his godfather and godmother. Congress was in an uproar of debate on adjournment, but Republicans and Democrats agreed on the issue that Bobby should be a member someday.

His grandfather, the Rev. Arthur H. Coar, of Pembroke, Mass., performing the christening, heard Mrs. Coar say, "we dedicate him to God and his country," and that expression, said the Rev. Mr. Coar, was symbolic of the generation in this day.

Yesterday names making news in the country's public life were signed to messages of condolence reaching Mr. and Mrs. Coar at their home in the Congressional Apartments. Bobby will be buried at 3 p. m. today in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

He was an only child.

Willkie Tells British He'll Try To Unite U. S. in Aiding Them

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 26.—Wendell L. Willkie, showing the same exuberance as when he campaigned for the Presidency last fall, arrived in England today "to do all I can to unite the United States and to give England all the aid that is possible in its struggle for free men all over the word."

His spirits were so buoyant on the flight from Lisbon, Portugal, that he couldn't keep his seat. He paced up and down in the plane and even helped the navigators chart their course.

Finally, he was so eager to see England that he incautiously stood up in the plane and fell in the aisle when it alighted at a western port. Unhurt and just as full of energy as before, he picked himself up and vigorously brushed his suit—the one he was wearing when he left New York by clipper Wednesday.

He carried a helmet which a friend had given him in New York. There was a reception committee on hand, which included Commander C. R. Thompson and Thomas Brand, representing the British government; Herschel Johnson, United States Charge d'Affaires in London, and Gen. Martin Scanlon and Commander N. R. Hitchcock of the American Embassy.

"I am very glad to be in England, for whose cause I have the utmost sympathy," Willkie said, "and for whom I am attempting to do all I can to unite the United States and to give England all the aid that is possible in its struggle for free men all over the world."

British Smash Second Italian Line in Eritrea

Invaders Close In On Agordat; Derna Fate Believed Sealed

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Jan. 26.—The British forces in Eritrea yesterday broke the second Italian defense line between Biscia and Barentu, and closed in on the mountain town of Agordat.

During the two days preceding, the British outflanked and broke up th first Italian line drawn from Kru to Aicota.

Agordat, which possesses only weak defenses, appeared to be at the mercy of the invaders. If it falls the British will have a good highway and will be slightly more than ninety miles from Asmara, the Eritean capital and the metropolis, where most of the European population has congregated because of the comparatively healthful mountain climate.

Rough Terrain Only Obstacle

Only the increasing altitude and roughness of terrain appears to stand in the way of the British if they break the Italian lines again, and this appears to be imminent.

The mountains between Agordat and Asmara will force the army to follow the highway, making the Italian defense easier, hence the British are intent on surrounding and capturing the Italians before moving further. Flanking movements are already in operation east of Agordat, particularly by units moving north from the Aicota region.

In Libya the fate of the small seaport of Derna appeared to have been sealed as British reinforcements have strengthened the tank patrols around the comparatively defenseless position of the Italians. The fortifications and garrisons there are both weaker than those of Tobruk.

The Royal Air Force has given extensive support to the army drives, both in Eritrea and in Libya, bombing truck concentrations in the Keru area and attacking the Maraua landing ground between Derna nad Bengazi.

Plane Plants on 7-Day Week; Greatest Blitz Yet Feared by Easter

By the United Press

London (Monday), Jan. 27.—Britain today launched a huge arms program, placing all aviation plants on a seven-day week in a race against "the crisis of our lives," which the British people were told may come before Easter, with a Nazi air onslaught aimed at total destruction.

The program is designed to provide the army, navy and air force with all the weapons needed to repel a three-pronged "blitz" by air, land and sea.

At the urgent request of the Ministry of Aircraft Productions under Lord Beaverbrook, all aircraft factories will operate seven days a week. Some have been on such a schedule for a long time, but the new order is all-embracing.

Simultaneously, authorities urged all other war factories to "work to the maximum" of their production until every need of the armed forces is supplied, including nonstop day and night relays of workers to keep the wheels turning.

On Wednesday a "war effort" conference will meet in Whitehall with Minister of Labor Ernest

Acheson Minority Offers New Plan

A code of standards for fair administrative procedure for Federal agencies was proposed last night in a report by three members of the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure, headed by Dean Acheson.

A minority group declared the report "falls far short of the requirement of an adequate basis for the improvement of American administrative law."

President and Party Elude Celebrity-Seekers at Theater

(Other Stories and Pictures, Pages 10 and 15.)

The man in the street went to a "command performance" for President Roosevelt at the National Theater last night, but he didn't see the Chief Executive and his party.

The President was there, in his box, laughing and enjoying the good humor of the play, "Old Acquaintance." He and his official party entered the theater by a rear door while a couple of hundred celebrity-hungry persons stood in the snow in front of the playhouse.

With President and Mrs. Roosevelt were Vice President and Mrs. Wallace, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Robert Baker, Mrs. W. B. Maloney, Miss Margaret LeHand, the President's secretary, and Miss Malvina Thompson, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary.

A dozen Secret Service agents and a score of Metropolitan police plainclothesmen surrounded the theater and stood guard in the lobbies.

Those huddled in front of the theater witnessed a procession of mink and ermine coats with top-hatted escorts and "more Congressmen than you could count," in the words of one young woman.

John van Druten, author of the play, was there, after a plane flight from Hollywood. From New York came Dwight Deere Wiman, veteran producer, and Howard Culman, the producer who put the old Roxy Theater on its feet.

Following the presentation the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained the cast and a small group

The Axis Creaks

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 26. The Italian secret police and agents of the German Gestapo have arrested between 20 and 30 persons, "including certain Italian army officers and Fascist officials" at Milan and Turin, it was learned tonight from high foreign diplomatic sources here.

The secret police conducted raids during the course of late yesterday and last night, after three Italian officers identified as "generals" reportedly were shot and killed by German soldiers at Milan.

At Peak Friday

Belgrade diplomatic sources and correspondents' reports from the Yugoslav-Italian frontier contained information of disturbances in Milan, Turin and other industrial cities and towns of a caliber described as "serious and far-reaching." (These reports were denied in Rome.)

Rioting in Milan is reported to have reached its peak yesterday afternoon when, according to information disclosed to this correspondent, German soldiers and marines were summoned by Italian authorities to help preserve order.

Later reports said that the Milan telephone exchange, the postoffice and telegraph buildings and the railroad station were in the control of German officers and that sentries were posted about these and other public buildings and factories. Similar reports concerning German patrols about public buildings mentioned Turin and "many factories" of northern industrial Italy.

200 Reported Killed

An "unknown" number of dead and "many wounded" are reported at Milan and Turin, although the most reliable information that this correspondent has does not give the exact figure of the casualties, beyond the killing of three Italian officers identified as generals.

A Zagreb newspaper received the report tonight that 200 had been

Guardists Pay With Lives For Rebellion

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 26.—Peace once again settled over Rumania today and leaders of the insurrection began to pay—some with their lives—the price of a rebellion that failed.

Some high-ranking Iron Guard leaders were said to have committed suicide.

They were followers of vanquished Vice Premier Horia Sima to whom the dictate had come from victorious Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu:

"You rebels! If you are true Iron Guardists punish yourself with true legionary punishment or otherwise you may be sure that I shall apply mass punishment myself."

Sima was reported facing court martial after being arrested in a sleeping car in flight.

There was no definite estimate of what a week of rebellion had cost in dead and wounded.

Political circles expressed belief that Antonescu would succeed now in keeping order and in preventing terrorist groups of the Iron Guard from ever reorganizing again.

Records Seized

The Rumanian army, it was pointed out, has seized all archives of the movement and, therefore, is in possession of its lists of members, records of their activities and other information necessary for a complete clean-up.

Also, it was recalled, while former King Carol turned the entire guard against him with his 1939 mass execution, Antonescu has won to his side the older, more temperate leaders of the movement by his refusal to order the army to fire until the safety of the nation was imperiled.

These guardists evidently were impressed by confirmed reports that while the rebels were shooting to kill, Antonescu's soldiers had received orders to fire only at legs when possible to avoid inflicting death.

Churches were thronged with Rumanians praying that peace will be permanent in their country which in the last year has suffered from earthquake, disemberment, terror and revolution.

Hundreds of Jews massacred in the fierce outburst of hatred were given mass funerals.

Over Iron Guard youths who died in the bloody attempt at coup d'etat, however, no ceremonies were permitted. The only concession allowed their relatives was temporary opening of the Iron Guard Church where women in black went to say silent prayers for the victims.

Thirty Rumanian officers who were mowed down by the guns of what Antonescu's government called "rebels, cutthroats and assassins" will be given a solemn military funeral and burial as national heroes tomorrow.

An undetermined number of soldiers also will be buried tomorrow.

The municipal hospital and morgues still hold unclaimed dead. Many are Iron Guardists whose relatives hesitate to appear in public to identify them.

Revolver Found

Former Health Institute Iasinski was among those reported executed under a new emergency law exacting death of anyone found with firearms. One version was that he appeared at Antonescu's office Friday declaring he wished to see the dictator to pledge his loyalty, that he was searched in accordance with military procedure before being admitted and that a revolver was found strapped to his leg.

While calm reigned throughout Rumania, Bucharest presented a scene of striking contrast.

On the Calea Victoriei, bathed in a warm sun, crowds promenaded past hotels and smart shops.

On a side street nearby stood six trim-looking tanks. In a vacant lot, soldiers surveyed the scene in readiness behind a piece of field artillery. Infantrymen patrolled the streets, their eyes on the massive apartment house from which much of last week's sniping had come.

In the Jewish section, tanks and trucks loaded with watchful soldiers rolled past smashed store fronts, looted shops and wrecked homes.

Iron Guard district headquarters and all public buildings were under heavy guard.

Antonescu, accompanied by German Minister Baron Manfred von Killinger, German Gen. Haensel and two Rumanian generals now heading the Bucharest and state police, made a tour of hospitals and morgues to observe how seriously victims had been maltreated. They found that even gold teeth had been removed from many bodies.

Guard Stronghold Falls

Bucharest, Jan. 26 (U.P.)—Rumanian army troops loyal to Premier Gen. Antonescu tonight were reported to have captured Brasov, chief city of Transylvania and Iron Guard stronghold, after a 50-hour battle with rebel forces barricaded in public buildings.

There were reports that, despite the government's assertion that Horia Sima had been captured, he was still at large and was continuing the rebellion at Brasov.

(A report from the Bulgarian frontier said that Sima and Gen. George Petrovicescu, minister of interior, whose ouster touched off the uprising, had been captured and put to death.)

700 Jews Reported Slain

New York, Jan. 26 (U.P.)—The New York Jewish Morning Journal, in a dispatch from London, reported tonight that 700 Jews are known to have been slain and 7,000 wounded during the Iron Guard rebellion in Rumania.

Princesses Play in U. S. Plane As George VI Decorates Fliers

Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 26.—Princess Elizabeth, heiress-apparent to the throne of England, played at the controls of an American-made bomber of an R. A. F. coastal command station today while her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, lay down and focused the bomb sight.

The girls, 13 and 9, making their first visit to an R. A. F. war station with their parents, climbed aboard the Hudson bomber with the pilot, a young New Zealand officer. The plane, of course, did not leave the ground.

Queen Elizabeth joined the princesses in the machine. The elder princess seemed especially thrilled when told that the plane recently had been flown across the Atlantic.

King George decorated 18 officers and men for deeds of "gallantry in the face of the enemy" and talked several minutes to Squadron Leader R. S. Tuck, who is credited with shooting down at least 10 planes and who received the Distinguished Service Order.

New Italian Counterattack Shattered, Greeks Report

By the Associated Press

Athens, Jan. 26.—Greek troops smashed in hand-to-hand combat a violent Italian counterattack launched at dawn today by plane-ferried troops of Mussolini's new generallissimo in Albania.

Dispatches from the front said the Greeks were pushing methodically onward into Albania north of Klisura.

Some of the troops used in the assault—one of the strongest yet launched by the Italians since the war began almost three months ago—have just arrived from Italy, ferried across the Adriatic Sea by plane. The attack was planned to restore morale.

This was learned, dispatches said, from prisoners who told Greeks they belonged to a battalion which had just reached Albania but already had been destroyed.

Greek sources said the desperate effort of Gen. Ugo Cavallero to halt the Greeks was indicated when some captured Italian officers said they had been sent back to the front from a hospital without obtaining convalescence leave.

Among prisoners taken in the day's fighting were troops belonging to an Italian Alpine division which was appearing on the Albanian theater of war for the first time, it was said.

The high command's communique merely reported "restricted successful operations" and "we took some prisoners."

Italian planes flew against the Greek forces, but reports from the front said many of their bombs fell behind their own lines when the Greek fighters attacked. It was in this sector that the Greeks reported three Italian planes shot down Saturday.

British bombers cooperating with the Greek air force reported successful, low-level attacks on Bulsa, in the vicinity of Elbasani.

The R. A. F. reported all bombs fell in the target area and direct hits were scored on a military camp and an advance supply depot.

"A large fire was seen to break out and a big explosion also was caused," the R. A. F. reported. "Antiaircraft fire was met and enemy fighters attacked, but all our aircraft returned safely."

London, Jan. 26.—Free from German radiers for six nights, London went into the seventh tonight with the feeling commonly expressed that "Hitler is up to no good," possibly a grand slam attack.

There was virtually no aerial activity over Britain during daylight. A single Nazi plane dropped a bomb on the northeast coast without causing damage or casualties. The crew of the trawler Galvani shot down a Junkers-88 when the plane attacked it in the North Sea, off the Norfolk coast.

The Admiralty communique, relating this latter occurrence, said the Galvani suffered no damage or casualties. Four members of the crew, two of them injured, were captured. The fifth escaped.

Many observers attribute the German silence to the bad continental weather, but it has been noted that the R. A. F. has been able to fly and bomb the Nazi submarine base at Lorient, France, Friday night.

Other reasons advanced are that the plight of Italy and Rumania have drawn many German aces and ground crews from western Europe and those left behind cannot keep up the raid tempo of the past months.

There is also talk that Germany is facing an oil shortage. This is an old story. Nevertheless, the admitted "transfers of aircraft to oil-starved Italy" might hamper the raids on England.

killed in "rioting in northern Italy." The same sources reported that the disturbances were general throughout the larger cities and towns of the Po Valley and that German soldiers are using arms against demonstrators and rioters. This information is unconfirmed.

Milan is reported somewhat quieter tonight, with German patrols on the streets, curfew at an "early hour" and the Italian police and the Gestapo in major public buildings, which are closed to all persons save officials and persons on official business.

Unconfirmed reports from the Yugoslav-Italian frontier tonight said that German troops are being sent from Gorizia and Udine to Turin and Milan and other cities and towns in northern and northeastern Italy. Aerial transports loaded with German soldiers and marines have been seen taking off from Campo Formio Airdrome, it is reported, and special express trains with troops aboard are reported en route to Milan from the vicinity of Padua.

Riot Report Corroborated

New York, Jan. 26 (INS).—The Columbia Broadcasting Company tonight broadcast:

"While Italian officials deny the reports of serious rioting in Milan and other northern Italian cities as ridiculous invention, diplomatic advices from the Balkans, received in Bern, Switzerland, insist that the riots did take place, with heavy casualties; and that Italian soldiers fought on the rebel side.

"A number of Italian army officers and several other men, reported to be dignitaries of the Fascist Party, are said to have been arrested by the Italian secret police and the German Gestapo (secret police).

"Italian officials declare that the only Germans in Italy are members of the air force," the broadcast continued. "But Berlin newspapers, quoted by C. B. S. Correspondent Harry W. Flannery Saturday night, speak of endless trains carrying fresh supplies to the air force, and information in London is that the Germans have sent large numbers of soldiers into Italy, ostensibly as ground crews for planes.

"The Turkish radio, as picked up by Columbia's short wave listening station, says that German staff officers are now being attached to Italian commands."

Italy Denies Disorder

By the Associated Press

Rome, Jan. 26. — Authoritative Italians today tagged foreign reports of disorders in Milan, Turin and smaller northern Italy cities as "a ridiculous invention without the slightest basis."

On the African front, the high command acknowledged in a special war bulletin that British soldiers were steadily hampering the Italians west of Tobruk, latest Libyan city to fall to the British.

Italian planes successfully attacked the British and Greeks in Africa, Albania and Greece itself, the high command reported in its regular communique. It said ten "enemy" planes were shot down to one Italian bomber.

The Italians said one bombing formation raided "military objectives at Salonika, Greece, hitting port works, gasoline depots, supply warehouses and the railway station."

Italian planes are cooperating "effectively" with soldiers in the Libyan fighting, the communique added, "scatter-bombing and machine-gunning enemy troops and mechanized units."

It said four British planes were shot down in flames during an aerial engagement yesterday over Libya and four others were shot down in East Africa.

One brief mention was made of a new sea action, the communique asserting that Italian naval units "bombarded enemy positions on the Greek-Albanian coast." Where the bombardment took place was not reported.

In a restatement of Italian war aims, Mario Appelius, commentator on Premier Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo d'Italia, said today:

"So long as the British flag waves over Port Said, and Gibraltar, so long as Aden commands the entrance to the Red Sea, so long as Malta and Bizerte remain outside the Italian military system, and so long as the Balkans are not freed of English greed and corruption Italy will not be the mistress of her own air and Italians will be condemned to perennial fights for breath."

Bizerte is a naval base at the tip of French Tunisia, jutting out into the Mediterranean near the Strait of Sicily through which British convoys crossing the Mediterranean must pass. Possession of that naval base would give the Axis a stronghold on the central Mediterranean.

Mention of Bizerte caused foreign observers to speculate whether the Axis chiefs had decided to press France to relinquish that important post.

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 26.—"Considerable numbers" of Germans are entering Italy, ostensibly as ground staffs for Nazi air units but their main purpose apparently is to support the Fascist regime, an informed source asserted today.

"The German air force in Italy seems to require an unusual number of ground crew members to keep it in condition," this source said. "It is possible this is designed to keep the Italians in order."

The greatest German concentrations are reported in Sicily, where dive bombers are based, and at Trieste. The source was reluctant to speculate as to their presence in Trieste which is in northeastern Italy, near the Yugoslav border.

Authorities have warned, however, that reports of extensive unrest in Italy should be treated with reserve.

Two British Ships Reported Sunk By Nazi Planes

Berlin, Jan. 26 (AP).—Two British merchantmen, each of about 4,000 tons, were claimed today as victims of Nazi air attack in widely separated raids on British shipping.

In one attack a German reconnaissance plane was said to have passed over Harwich, on the English east coast, and scored direct hits on one steamer in a convoy.

In another foray, about 300 miles west of Ireland, the high command said a long distance bomber on patrol sank another merchant ship.

Eire Orders Coal Rationed

Dublin, Jan. 26 (AP).—Ireland ordered today rationing of coal to a half-ton per month for each household and an increase in the extraction of flour from wheat from 80 to 90 per cent of the grain.

The orders were part of a campaign to cope with shortages due to transport difficulties. The problem on wheat is to stretch a six-month supply to seven and one-half months. The ministry of supplies has asked the public to use oatmeal and potatoes as much as possible as wheat flour substitutes.

Red Army Journal Praises British Strategy, Doubts Germans Can Crack Island Defense

By Henry Shapiro
United Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Jan. 26.—The official organ of the Soviet army, Red Star, today paid high tribute to Britain's war strategy in Europe and Africa, and asserted that Germany would be compelled to use "a colossal force" for any attempted invasion of the British Isles.

Italy, it was said by the Red Star, faces the prospect of being knocked completely out of the war in Africa under the hammering blows of the British.

The defenses of the British Isles have "grown immensely" in strength since June, 1940, making the success of any Nazi invasion blow doubtful, it was stated, and although the appearance of the German air force in the Mediterranean is having effects, "it cannot fully prevent the maneuverability of the British navy."

"The powerful German military machine has proved inadequate to overcome the water barrier controlled by the strong British Navy," it was added, in reference to the English Channel.

"If, on the other hand, both sides give up the problematic possibility of decisive action on the land theaters and prefer 'the battle of England,' the war may last many years.

"Conditions are so different since the last war that it is impossible to rely on victory only by the means of naval blockade and air bombings."

In Africa, the Red Star said, the British army has abandoned its traditional tactics of attrition, seized the initiative and dealt the Italians blows which threaten to mop up all of Africa.

"The military action in the Greek theater immobilized approximately one-third of the Italian army," it was stated. "Moreover, the Greeks are retaining the initiative and steadily pushing the Italians to the sea.

"The Italian failures in Albania created favorable conditions for the activization of the engagements in Africa. When the fighting at Sidi Barrani began (the start of the British offensive) most foreign observers did not attach much significance to it.

"But the English generals proved to be good students and carried on their operations in accordance with the most modern methods . . .

"The appearance of the German air force in the Mediterranean somewhat hampers the maneuverability of the British navy, but cannot fully prevent its operation.

"Utilizing the immense human resources of its dominions, England now is able to develop extensive operations on all fronts in East Africa."

U.S. Spiriting Nazis To Old CCC Camp

San Francisco, Jan. 26 (AP).—Secrecy surrounding that of wartime today enshrouded the Government's plans to transport 400 German merchant seamen from Angel Island immigration station to an abandoned CCC camp near Fort Stanton, N. Mex.

It was learned 35 of the sailors would leave tomorrow in a prison car but immigration officials refused comment.

Why People Drop Life Insurance Policies

'HINDSIGHT AND FORESIGHT'
a weekly column by
Holger J. Johnson
President Institute of Life Insurance

A LETTER from the head of a family tells of his experience in the last depression. He relates how, because of financial pressure, he dropped one of his policies in order to raise cash to pay off his debts and start life anew.

JOHNSON

Had he consulted his agent, he might possibly have been able to accomplish the same purpose without even a temporary loss of protection—his letter didn't give all the facts. Fortunately, he remained insurable and his comeback was rapid; he was so impressed with this unexpected usefulness of life insurance as he saw it operate in a crisis that the family now has four policies instead of the original two.

We all regret that any policy should ever be terminated. Neither the insurance company or anyone else likes to see people drop their insurance.

The chief underlying cause of most lapses and surrenders of policies is economic pressure, as indicated by the way they rise and fall with unemployment, moving opposite to the curve of business activity. Another cause is the great difficulty many of us have in carrying out our good intentions—whether they relate to family protection, systematic saving or even to planned spending.

Fortunately these terminated policies have served a purpose. On some, a cash surrender is paid, as in the case above. In other cases, the full amount of protection is continued for a term of years, or a reduced amount of insurance is provided without further payment of premiums.

As for the remaining cases, where the termination took place before such benefits were earned, the family was protected while the insurance was in force—and in this connection it is significant that last year over 66,000 death claims were paid on insurance in force less than a year.

Thus, to get a clear and true picture of life insurance in action, we must always bear in mind the manifold and flexible benefits which the modern policy makes available to its owner.

This regular Monday column is provided by the Institute of Life Insurance to permit its President to speak to America's policy owners. Address inquiries to the Institute at 60 East 42nd St., New York City.

Nazi Airman Reaches N. Y. In 3d Escape

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 26.—A wiry little Nazi air officer claiming to have downed 14 "enemy" ships before his capture by the British reached the haven of the German consulate in New York today anxious to return to his fatherland so "I can shoot down some more."

Exuberant despite twinges from his bandaged ears—frozen in crossing the St. Lawrence River in sub-zero weather during an escape from a Canadian prison train—26-year-old Baron Franz von Werra expressed delight at the good fortune which brought him to a nation where his deportation to Germany is probable.

International law rules out his return to Canada by American authorities.

He was supremely confident of his eventual return to his homeland.

"I'll find my way back to Germany as well as I found my way out of prison camps three times," he said, grinning.

Talking easily in English as he rode by train toward his first glimpse of New York City, the young Nazi airman expressed belief the war would be won by Germany—sometime this summer—"I'm as sure of that as I'm alive."

He avoided all questions concerning military matters and details of his escapes, saying he was under strict orders from "our representatives in New York." At Grand Central Station he was hastened away in a cab by an unidentified person, apparently from the German consulate.

Later he was taken to the Astor Hotel in Times Square.

The airman was at liberty under $5,000 bond posted by the German consulate within two hours after his arrest and detention at Ogdensburg, N. Y., near the Canadian border, on a charge of illegal entry into the United States. A Federal graund jury in Albany will hear his testimony Thursday.

Forced down in England September 7, Von Werra was made a prisoner of war, but escaped twice. It did him no good, he said, "because I couldn't get out of the country."

Subsequently he was shipped to Halifax with other prisoners. While en route he sold all his valuables to British sailors on the prison ship in line with a new plan he had for escape to the United States.

"You know," he said smilingly, "without money, nothing can be done in America. So the first thing I did was get as much as I could by selling things."

That was as much as he would say about his escape. From others, it was learned that he crossed the St. Lawrence in an open rowboat near Galoup Rapids—a feat which natives thought impossible without help.

Von Werra asserted there was no comparison between this war and the World War.

"This war is the msitake of the British and French staffs," the airman said. "They have used the same tactics of 1918. But we have prepared for modern war."

Wheeler, Nye Plan War Aims Bill

spoils."

In a joint statement to the press, Wheeler and Nye declared:

"The threat of American involvement in a foreign war is imminent today, and before this Nation plunges from the brink into the holocaust of war, the people of the United States are entitled to know the war aims and peace conditions of England, Germany, Greece, China, Japan and any other warring powers.

"Most historians and students agree that the Treaty of Versailles provoked the present war. Before the United States goes any further along the road to war we should have the assurances from our potential allies that American boys will not be plowed under European soil every 25 years.

"The lesson of the last World War should not be forgotten. We learned at tremendous cost the utter and complete futility of that war. We made our sacrifices in blood, in tears and in dollars to make the world safe for democracy and to end all wars less than 25 years ago."

The National Coordinating Committee for the C. I. O. women's auxiliaries, headed by John L. Lewis' daughter, Miss Kathryn Lewis, issued a denunciation of the aid bill last night and urged all members to write their Congressmen in opposition to it.

The C. I. O. itself has taken no official stand on the measure. President Philip Murray and the six C. I. O. vice presidents were understood to have met recently to discuss the matter but to have reached no agreement.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, said in a statement, meanwhile, that Wendell L. Willkie had given those who supported him last election "a pretty raw deal" by approving emergency powers for President Roosevelt, with a time limit, in the lend-lease bill.

Capper's statement recalled former Kansas Gov. Alf M. Landon's disagreement with Willkie's views on the pending legislation.

Witness Is Sought In D. C. Drowning

A man identified as Albert Davis, 63, of 1009 G Street Southeast, was drowned yesterday afternoon in the Anacostia River. The body was recovered last night.

Police were unable to learn how Davis had fallen into the water, and were seeking a witness who notified them of the drowning.

Stalin, Hitler Peas in a Pod, Kerensky Says

Speaking on the question, "Who will win—Stalin or Hitler?" Alexander Kerensky, one-time premier of Russia, told a Town Hall of Washington yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel last night that both men are "brothers under the skin."

"Our common democracy in Christian Europe is dead . . . Only Britain in its stubbornness and ability to fight to the end remains as the final hope for the resurrection of a free Europe," he said.

Declaring that both Russia nad Germany are linked beyond hope of separation in the common cause of defeating democracy, Kerensky said, "Two worlds of ideas are in conflict (the democracies and the totalitarian states). No compromise is possible between them.

"Our task consists in finding a real new order, in which the freedom of the individual will be preserved in an economic system dedicated to the common good.

"In this struggle against tyranny you have one faithful ally who has not yet spoken—the Russian people . . . Without freedom in Russia there can be no free Europe and no free world."

Says Soviet Dissembles

Russia's diplomats in England are skillfully keeping alive the idea that Russia may yet come to Britain's aid while Communist propaganda in the embattled island is determined "to undermine and destroy the heroic will of the British people on the very eve of the most critical weeks of the war," Kerensky stated.

He warned that in the United Communist agents "are doing everything possible to check the organization of aid" for Britain.

"The united Nazi-Soviet fifth column is operating here with the same technique as it did in Europe—and for the same end. If Moscow really were preparing to break with Berlin it would scarcely be conducting its enormous campaign for capitulation by the democracies," he declared.

"Stalin foresaw the present war as early as 1929 and began preparing for it at that time," Kerensky said, pointing out the following stages in the establishment of his present role in accord with Hitler:

The industrialism and militarism of Russia; instructions to the German Communist Party to work with Hitler for the destruction of the German Republic; the Popular Front maneuver; the exploitation of the war in China and the war in Spain; the secret agreement with Hitler.

Kerensky Questioned

Members of the panel questioning Kerensky following his address were Senator Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa; the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, and Barnet Nover, columnist of The Post.

When Senator Gillette asked, "Has the United States made a mistake in lifting the moral embargo against the Soviet?" Kerensky replied affirmatively by saying, "The answer was in my speech."

Father Walsh joined with Senator Gillette in assailing the lifting of the moral embargo against Russia. In reply to a question by Nover, on a statement he made regarding Munich, Kerensky declared:

"A monument may some day be raised to Chamberlain for what he did at Munich. I hold the unpopular belief that he thwarted Hitler's original intent of marching through Czecho-Slovakia and Rumania to the Black Sea. Perhaps that is the step in which Hitler lost the war."

Dr. Frank Bohn was chairman of the meeting.

Matsuoka Accuses Hull Of 'Distortion'

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Jan. 26.—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka was quoted by Domei, Japanese news agency, today as saying "the development of friendly relations between Japan and the United States will remain an idle dream" so long as "America maintains her policy of regarding China, instead of the eastern Pacific, as her first line of defense."

Matsuoka testified before a budget committee, the agency reported, and in answering questions concerning recent statements by United States Secretary of State Hull described the Secretary's description of the Manchurian incident as "such an obvious distortion of the facts that it will not bear the barest scrutiny."

(Testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee January 15, Hull said the first step in the direction of "tyrannical rule" was taken "in the Far East in 1931 with forceful occupation of Manchuria in contravention of the provisions of the Nine-Power Treaty and of the Kellogg-Briand Pact.

("The equilibrium in the Far East which had been established by the Washington Conference treaties of 1921-22 became seriously disturbed by the setting up by forceful means in a part of China of a regime under Japanese control under the name of 'Manchukuo.'" Hull asserted.)

The foreign minister reiterated a desire for friendship with the United States which he said must be based on "sympathetic understanding of each other's policy," Domei said.

Admiral Koshiro Oikawa, minister of the navy, testified, the agency reported, that the navy was prepared for any eventuality and that current budget estimates had been formulated with consideration for American naval expansion.

Fire Sweeps Naval Offices At Norfolk

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 26.—Fire today did an estimated $275,000 damage to the Norfolk naval operating base administration and communications offices and destroyed a quantity of official documents and records at this center for 10,000 service men.

A board of investigation was fromed immediately for an inquiry. The estimate of the damage was made by Capt. H. G. McClure, commandant of the naval training station.

The base was cut off from the outside by wire and radio for five hours. Origin of the blaze, which started in the radio room, was not determined.

The building was about a half mile from piers where were tied up the cruiser Quincy, a number of destroyers, supply ships and tugs.

New hangars for the naval air station were being built nearby but no other buildings were threatened.

The section burned included the auditorium and paymaster's office. Money in a vault in the basement was undamaged.

Several holes were burned in the roof and water did some damage in the west wing of the building which houses the administrative offices of Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, district commandant.

The East wing, occupied by the Naval Training Station administration office, escaped damage.

The blaze was discovered at 9:15 a. m. and the flames quickly spread through the barn-like auditorium. Two women telephone operators stood by their posts until finally driven away by the flames.

All three fire companies at the base were called out and hurry calls were sent to the city of Norfolk for equipment. Three city companies were sent and the firemen, aided by about 200 service men, succeeded in getting the fire under control by noon.

Naval authorities quickly established Marine guards at all gates and roads. Entry to the base was denied to all except officers in uniform. Newspapermen and photographers later were allowed to enter the reservation under restrictions.

Oswego, N. Y., Jan. 26 (AP).—Fourteen colored soldiers of Harlem's 369th antiaircraft regiment were burned or injured tonight when fire swept the supply wing of the administration building at Fort Ontario.

Exploding ammunition endangered soldiers fighting the fire while an east wind kept the flames away from the new $500,000 65-building cantonment completed at the fort last week.

Silver Shirt Aide's Trial Starts Today

David A. Mayne, former aide of William Dudley Pelley, Silver Shirt leader, is scheduled to go on trial in the District Court today on charges of forging Pelley's name to letters which purported to link Representative Martin Dies with Pelley's organization.

All members of the Dies Committee, several other Congressmen, and Pelley have been summoned as prosecution or defense witnesses.

Alleged victim of the swindle was Gardner Jackson, legislative representative of Labor's Nonpartisan League, who claimed he paid Mayne $105 for the letters. Jackson claimed he made the purchase through Harold O. Weisberg, former investigator for the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee.

Parley to Map Woman's Place In Defense

Woman's probable part in the national defense program will be discussed by delegates from all parts of America, representing more than 1,000,000 women, at the sixteenth Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense opening at 8 o'clock this evening at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Louis J. Lemstra, of Indianapolis, president of the American Legion Auxiliary and chairman of the conference, yesterday said that the auxiliary members, by March 15, would fill out questionnaires relating to their individual qualifications for such national defense work as the women of Great Britain now are performing.

The questionnaire information will be given both State and Federal officials, she said. Many of the members were expected to qualify as canteen and first-aid workers, nurses and chauffeurs.

Milo J. Warner, national commander, American Legion; Matthew Woll, vice president, American Federation of Labor, and Walter D. Fuller, president, National Association of Manufacturers, will address the conference mass meeting tonight. The delegates at 2 p. m. today will make pilgrimages to the Unknown Soldier's Tomb.

Speakers tomorrow morning will be Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, of the Navy Department; Carl E. Milliken, secretary, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; L. R. Pennington, inspector, Federal Bureau of Investigation; Senator Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama; Representative Melvin J. Maas (Republican), of Minnesota; and in the afternoon the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Niles Trammel, president, National Broadcasting Co.; Allan Webb, governor, "Virginia Boys State;" John W. Slacks, financial assistant to the chairman, United States Maritime Commission, and Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director, Selective Service System.

The banquet, at 8 p. m. tomorrow, will be addressed by Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent, London Times, and Administrator Paul V. McNutt, of the Federal Security Agency. All sessions will be at the Mayflower Hotel. One thousand delegates, representing 34 patriotic organizations, are expected to attend.

Merit System Called Essential To Democracy

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 26.—The merit system is essential in the present crisis confronting democracy, it was emphasized in the annual report of the National Civil Service Reform League made public today by Samuel H. Ordway, jr., president.

Modern merit system techniques, if used to the full, can enable America to "meet this crisis, achieve wider democracy than it has ever known and establish our form of government as the most efficient, responsible and socially acceptable government on earth," the report said.

Ordway was reelected president of the league. Vice presidents chosen include James R. Angell, Charles C. Burlingham, Robert Catherwood, Howard R. Guild, William Browne Hale, A. Lawrence Lowell, George McAneny, Charles P. Taft, Leonard D. White and Russell Whitman. Chairman of the council is Nicholas Kelley, with Ogden H. Hammond, treasurer, and H. Eliot Kaplan, executive secretary.

4 'Menaces' Found by 4 Forum Talkers

Four speakers of as many divergent political complexions outlined four sources from which American democracy is threatened during the American Forum of the Air, broadcast from the Willard Hotel last night by WOL. Stephen J. McCormick, chief announcer for WOL, presided as moderator in the illness of Theodore Granik, scheduled as moderator.

Speakers were Norman Thomas, perennial candidate for President on the Socialist ticket; Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, New Deal Democrat; Col. Henry Breckinridge, old line Democrat and Assisatnt Secretary of War in President Wilson's Cabinet, and Representative William G. Stratton (Republican), of Illinois.

American democracy, Thomas said, is threatened chiefly from within America, by its failure to end unemployment and poverty, by intolerance and bigotry, racketeering and political corruption. It is threatened by war, he said, only because we are being pushed toward war by "the interventionists."

The threat to democracy, Senator Pepper said, arises from three sources, from "those within our borders . . . who do not really believe in the people controlling our Government and our national life;" from those who "cannot distinguish between a Roosevelt, who asks for power to save democracy for which he is accountable to the people, and a Hitler who takes power to destroy democracy and denies his accountability to anyone;" and from "those outside our borders who hate the name of democracy."

Col. Breckinridge saw the outstanding threat to American democracy from "the bloodthirsty tyrants of the Axis who have set forth to conquer and enslave the world." The survival "of our democracy," he said, "hinges upon the destruction of Adolf Hitler."

G.O.P. Loses Able Leader In Simpson

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 26.—Death at the early age of 45 has cost the Republican Party one of its most unorthodox but effective leaders—

SIMPSON

Representative Kenneth F. Simpson, who helped swing the 1940 G. O. P. Presidential nomination to Wendell Willkie.

The blunt-speaking former National Committeeman, serving his first term in elective office, succumbed unexpectedly at his home last night to a heart ailment which friends said had been brought on by overwork in the last campaign.

In London Willkie said: "Please say for me that I am greatly distressed. He was one of my dearest friends and I admired him very much."

A newcomer in Congress, he was elected from Manhattan's famous Seventeenth "Bluestocking" District after the incumbent, Bruce Barton, decided to run for the Senate. Simpson lost no time in getting into action.

Pushed Substitute Lend Bill

He was regarded by some as a Willkie spokesman and had introduced a substitute measure for President Roosevelt's "lend-lease" bill along lines suggested by Willkie.

The Simpson bill would place a two-year time limit on any extraordinary powers granted the President and would give Congress power to state what countries other than Ireland and Great Britain should receive United States munitions.

Barton, whom some thought might seek election to succeed his friend, issued a tribute in which he said that for the upbuilding of good government Simpson "cheerfully sacrificed every personal consideration—time and money, his law practice and finally his own life."

A central figure in factional controversies which first brought him to national attention, Simpson was repeatedly criticized by "Old Guard" party associates for endorsing New Deal social reform feasures and for making local alliances with the American Labor Party and with the Fusionist group which reelected Mayor F. H. LaGuardia in 1937.

Wanted Liberal G. O. P.

Disregarding his critics, Simpson once bluntly told party leaders:

"The people will turn to the Republican Party only if they are sure that it is not under the domination of Mr. Hoover, the Liberty League and some of the reactionary influences of the past. If we turn that way, we might as well fold up."

Simpson helped elect Thomas E. Dewey District Attorney here in 1937, but declined to support the latter's Presidential ambitions. In subsequent factional battles with Dewey forces he lost his post as national committeeman. He also resigned recently as New York County Republican chairman, leaving the Dewey group in titular control of the party's city and State organizations.

Funeral services will be held at St. James Episcopal Church at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

Simpson was the second member of the Seventy-seventh Congress to die. Representative Sam C. Massingale (Democrat), of Oklahoma, died January 17.

Count Istvan Csaky, Foreign Minister of Hungary, Dies

Stricken on Train After Signing Pact With Yugoslavia

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Hungary (Monday), Jan. 27.—Count Istvan Csaky, 46, foreign minister of Hungary during the past two critical years, died at 2:34 a. m. today after an illness of six weeks.

Count Csaky, youngest foreign minister in Hungary's history, had been in a coma since last Saturday.

He had been ill since mid-December but hope for his recovery was held out until Saturday night, when he suffered a relapse.

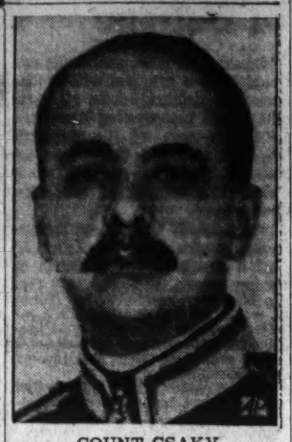
Count Csaky was stricken while aboard a train bringing him home from Belgrade, where he had just signed a friendship agreement between the Hungarian and Yugoslav governments.

First diagnosed as influenza, his illness later was identified as food poisoning.

At his bedside when he died was his young wife of eight months.

Count Csaky was a career diplomat, a professional who could trade punches with the best of them in that hard-fisted trade. But he was first of all a Hungarian patriot and ardent nationalist.

Nearly half his life had been spent in the foreign office. Brought up in prewar Austria-Hungary, he trained for his profession in the Royal Academy at Vienna. He entered the service of his country as an obscure legation attache in 1919, during the confusion following war's end.



COUNT CSAKY

Was at Munich Conference

His rise in the service was steady but unspectacular. Before he was called home to serve under Foreign Minister Koloman von Kanya in Budapest, he had been Minister to Spain and Portugal.

He was chief of the cabinet of von Kanya's ministry in 1938 and in this capacity was an observer at the Munich Conference, in which the Nazi remolding of Europe began to take form.

And, it was the Munich Conference that opened the way for Count Csaky to attain the post of foreign minister. Hungarian dissatisfaction over the size of the slice of Czecho-Slovakian territory allotted to Hungary at the conference brought von Kanya's resignation.

When Premier Bela Imredi presented his revamped cabinet in December, 1938, Count Csaky held the portfolio of foreign minister.

In the two yeras that preceded his fatal illness, Count Csaky spent more time "on the road" than a traveling salesman.

Rome and Berlin were his chief points of call, and he was said to have enjoyed the confidence of both Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler. Mussolini, who was perhaps his best foreign friend, once took him on a junket to Libya.

Count Csaky was respected in the chancelleries. Small-statured, he made up for size with energy, and his characteristic black mustache fairly bristled when he spoke.

A bachelor until he was 45, he married 28-year-old Countess Maria Chorinsky, descendant of a distinguished Moravian family, in May of last year.

The key to his policy during his service as foreign minister was the oft-repeated assertion that Hungary's greatest good lay in a tightening of her bond with Germany.

His mission of assuring Axis support for Hungary's claims to war-lost territory—without making commitments for any other sort of venture—was given a severe setback when Germany overran Poland from the west and Russia pressed in from the east.

But, even when German troops later poured into Hungary, Count Csaky was still busy mending Hungary's fences. He was returning from a successful mission to Yugoslavia, after signing a friendship agreement, when he was stricken ill on December 15.

Seriously ill, he still ran his office from the hospital bed. On January 1, when his condition was called "critical," he issued the statement:

"Hungary will take an active share in building the new European order—particularly in remolding Southeastern Europe."

It was his valedictory.

Chamber Backs Needed Outlays For Defense

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP).—The committee on federal finance of the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday approved "necessary expenditures" for national defense, but stated that "waste and extravagance should be held to the absolute minimum" and advocated a reduction in nondefense spending.

The group also recommended the creation of a Congressional budget agency to put a "ceiling" over Government outlays.

"Financially, the Federal Government is in a wilderness," the committee's report said. "The information available to the public does not indicate in any satisfactory manner its present financial condition nor is there evidence that the Government is giving adequate consideration to the longer range aspects of its fiscal policies. The budget recently submitted to Congress is both incomplete and misleading."

To provide "effective legislative control" over financial affairs, the committee suggested that a Congressional agency be established to consider the whole fiscal picture—including expenditures, revenues and debt. It added:

"Such an agency would report to Congress, recommending, among other matters, an aggregate total of expenditures which, when approved by Congress, could not be exceeded by the total of all the individual appropriations which would be made later.

"A 'ceiling' would thus be placed on expenditures. This agency, however, would not supplant the existing committee, which would develop the details of expenditures and revenues as at present."

The committee urged that revenues and nondefense expenditures be brought into annual balance and added:

"Nondefense expenditures should be sufficiently cut to achieve this balance next year as well as in succeeding years.

"Additional taxes levied to meet defense expenditures would then be definitely and wholly available for the purpose for which they were avowedly voted by Congress and accepted by the public—that is, to meet the expenditures accruing from the extraordinary defense program."

Labor projected a seven-day week plan during a Nation-wide raido broadcast.

Declaring that shipyards and numerous industries have already seen institution of the six-day week, the labor leader said the Federation deems it feasible, with an increase in working forces, to extend this to seven days by staggering workers' days off.

Net gain of such a departure would be a 40 per cent increase in total production over that possible on the five-day basis, he said, asserting that profits to industrialists would be "so much greater" as to more than compensate for extra labor costs.

Increase in Plane Fuel

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—A tremendous increase in the United States' capacity to produce 100-octane gasoline—super aviation fuel—was reported today by the American Petroleum Institute.

It said American refineries by March 1 would have a capacity of 550,000,000 gallons a year of the 100-octane fuel and that this capacity could be doubled within 12 or 14 months more through the expenditure of $30,000,000 in new plants.

Six years ago, 100-octane gas was a laboratory curiosity costing $30 a gallon. Production was slow in getting under way and accurate statistics were not gathered on plant operations.

The institute estimated, however, that in 1937, 7,000,000 gallons of the gasoline was produced. This output reached 20,000,000 gallons in 1938 and 100,000,000 in 1939, probably quadrupling in 1940.

At its 1941 production level, four times as much 100-octane gasoline can be reached as was the total demand for all types of aviation gasoline in 1939.

N.Y.-to-Britain Cargo Ship Run To Be Resumed

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Jan. 26.—The United States Lines will resume regular cargo ship operations between New York and Great Britain late in March with the five idle freighters which it acquired from the Maritime Commission last Thursday, it was learned in well-informed quarters today.

The ships for which the company paid $1,238,384 will require about two months to recondition and will be transferred to foreign registry, probably Panamanian, before entering the transatlantic trade.

Under the terms of the Maritime Commission's invitation to bid, the United States Lines will be permitted to transfer the five ships to alien registry and operate them to ports in Great Britain or other countries included in the combat areas designated by the President.

The five vessels in question are the Bakersfield of 8,642 deadweight tons; Egrement, 9,958 tons; Jacob Ruppert, 8,584 tons; West Pocasset, 8,553 tons, and West Campgaw, 8,591 tons. The Jacob Ruppert served as a supply ship on Admiral Richard E. Byrd's second Antarctic expedition.

The United States Lines, before the war, was long represented in the New York-United Kingdom trade in which it operated seven "merchant" type vessels and the liner President Harding under the American flag. Soon after the outbreak of hostilities President Roosevelt issued his neutrality proclamation barring American ships from combat areas.

Failing in its efforts to transfer eight of its 12 transatlantic vessels to foreign registry or to fit them into other trades under the American flag, the company finally obtained permission to sell the eight vessels to a Belgian concern.

The eight vessels were the President Harding renamed Ville de Bruges; American Importer, renamed Ville de Gand; American Trader, renamed Ville de Hasselt; American Shipper, renamed Ville de Mons; American Merchant, renamed Ville de Namur; American Banker, renamed Ville d'Anvers; American Farmer, renamed Ville de Liege; and American Traveler, renamed Ville d'Arlen. The first five have been lost by warfare, and it is feared that the Ville d'Arlen also has been lost, as she has been unreported since leaving Hereson November 15 for Liverpool. The other two Belgian ships are still operating in the United Kingdom run.

Other vessels withdrawn from the trans-Atlantic trade by the United States Lines were the President Roosevelt, recently sold to the War Department, and the big sister ships Washington and Manhattan, which with the new America, have been operating in the West Indies and intercoastal cruise trades. The America, although built for the Atlantic run, was not completed until after the outbreak of the war. She has been operating to the West Indies since she was commissioned last August, but will leave here next Wednesday night on the first of two cruises to California. The Manhattan is now aground off the Florida coast but is expected to be refloated in a few days.

Virginia Major On 600-Mile Trek Across Alaska

Chilkoot Barracks, Alaska, Jan. 26 (AP).—Ten United States Army men commanded by a Virginia major are learning just what moving across frozen wastes and snow-covered mountains means in these latitudes.

For the test, Maj. Charles H. Hart, jr., 53, commanding the squad, collected 43 husky dogs, 4 Yukon sleighs and 2 toboggans.

Accompanied by Capt. Avery Cochran, four noncommissioned officers and four privates, he set out yesterday on a 600-mile trek from this Army post on the Yukon border, hoping to reach Fairbanks in 30 to 40 days.

Code Offered By Acheson Minority

A statutory code of ethics for Federal administrative agencies last night was proposed by a three-member minority of the Dean Acheson committee, appointed by President Roosevelt to study administrative procedure in the Government.

The minority report was made public two days after that of the majority, and was signed by Carl McFarland, former assistant Attorney General; Dean Ed Blythe Stason, of the University of Michigan Law School, and Arthur T. Vanderbilt, former president of the American Bar Association.

The three declared in a statement that the full committee report "falls far short of the requirements of an adequate basis for the improvement of American administrative law."

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, filed a separate memorandum in which he concurs with the recommendation of the minority, though declining to support the legislative recommendations of either the majority or the minority of the committee.

The minority members said their proposed bill "provides many safeguards not contained in the committee's proposal, nor in the recently defeated Logan-Walter bill," opposed by Administration forces and then vetoed by the President, who contended that the report of the Acheson Committee should be awaited before legislation was undertaken. The Logan-Walter bill was an outgrowth of increasing criticism of procedure followed by many Federal agencies, such as the National Labor Relations Board.

The minority-proposed code of standards for fair administrative procedure provides that the function of those presiding at hearings shall be "judicial in nature" and their conduct governed by the "accepted canons of judicial ethics."

The effect of this provision in obviating ex parte consultations with officers and employes within an agency of which the defendant has no knowledge and which are not part of the record is obvious, the report said.

"The enactment of the proposed legislation," it continued, "would sound the death knell of review attorneys, for it is contemplated that those who decide a case within an agency shall personally know the record on which the decision is based."

Another provision of the proposed code would require that all publicity issued in newspapers by an agency shall give as much prominence to the position taken by the defendants as to that taken by the agency "in the interest of fair play."

The minority also took issue with the full committee report which had held that there are adequate opportunities for judicial review of administrative agencies' findings. The Logan-Walter bill would have provided far more resort to court action. The three members also stressed the need for separation of the judicial function from other activities of the administrative agencies, as well as the desirability of a "code of legislative standards of fair procedure."

Passengers Safe After Crack Train Plows Into Boulder

Oroville, Calif., Jan. 26 (AP).—The luxurious Exposition Flyer of the Western Pacific Railroad plowed into a huge boulder blocking tracks in the Feather River Canyon today, derailing the locomotive and baggage car, but injuring no passengers.

A baggageman was missing, and authorities expressed fear the unidentified man may have been trapped in the baggage car, which nosed into the rain-swollen river after breaking away from the rest of the train.

The locomotive plunged partially down the canyon wall and came to rest close by the water. Engineer Fred Loucks and his fireman, whose name was not immediately learned, saved their lives by jumping.

Back of the baggage car, the eight coaches, filled with passengers, jolted to a stop, but without injuring anybody.

Harvard Paper Selects Year's Movie 'Worsts'

ANN SHERIDAN

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 26.—The undaunted editors of the Harvard Lampoon, student monthly, published today their selections of the movie "worsts" of 1940, and sat back to await developments.

Last year's list of "worsts" brought a quick answer from Ann Sheridan, movie "oomph girl" termed least likely to succeed. Miss Sheridan revealed the size of her weekly pay checks, and asked the "Lampy" editors, "How are you doing?"

The Lampoon chose Miriam Hopkins as its "least desirable companion on a desert island," and named Jane Withers and Mickey Rooney the "most objectionable movie children."

The picture "All This and Heaven Too" was termed the "worst ordeal," and the last five minutes of "The Great Dictator" was chosen for the year's worst scene.

Selected for the worst performances of the year were Joan Bennett, in "The Son of Monte Cristo" and "Green Hell," and Henry Fonda in "The Return of Frank James."

Other worsts: Director William Dieterle, for "Hunchback of Notre Dame;" the writer, Louis Bromfield, for his script of "Brigham Young, Frontiersman;" Gene Tierney and Robert Preston as the worst discoveries.

There were a few "mosts" mixed into the list, too, but they all had reverse English on them.

They included: Most insipid, Brenda Joyce, in "Maryland," and Louis Hayward, in "My Son, My Son;" most colossal flop, "The Bluebird;" most frightening, the Andrews Sisters in "Argentine Nights;" most qualified for a pension, Joan Crawford and George Brent.

Selected as least likely to succeed were Leila Ernst, Boston debutante, who has a Hollywood contract, and Victor Mature.

Andrews Sisters Unruffled

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 26 (AP).—The "most frightening" Andrews sisters aren't at all put out at "those nice Harvard boys."

"We'd like to sing at a Harvard prom," they said here tonight. "We'd scare 'em to death."

of guests at supper at the White House.

Last night's performance at the National Theater was part of festivities in celebration of the President's fifty-ninth birthday, January 30. With the approach of the day, the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign is entering its final phase.

From Portland, Me., to Portland, Oreg., and from St. Paul, Minn., to Miami, Fla., parties will be held Thursday, linking celebration of the event with the will to eradicate poliomyelitis.

In Washington, parties will be held at leading hotels, with Mrs. Roosevelt leaving the White House at 10 a. m. Thursday to make a round of birthday balls at the Washington, Wardman Park, Shoreham, Mayflower and Hamilton Hotels.

Half a dozen stage and screen stars are arriving here early this week to attend the celebrations. Many already have arrived.

Catholic and Protestant leaders in the District yesterday cited the work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and urged support of the campaign as "Infantile Paralysis Sunday" was marked in Washington churches.

Willkie's Lincoln Day Speech In New York to Be Broadcast

Wendell L. Willkie, now surveying the war situation in England, will deliver an address in connection with Nation-wide Lincoln Day dinners February 12, the Republican National Committee announced last night. Arrangements to broadcast the address are under way.

Willkie, who has said he would seek to unite America behind the aid-England movement, probably will be making his first speech after his visit to England when he appears before the National Republican Club dinner in New York.

Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for the Presidential nomination which Willkie won, will be the principal speaker at a rally and dinner at the Mayflower Hotel here. Representative Joseph W. Martin, Republican national chairman, and Senator C. Wayland Brooks, of Illinois, also will speak at the dinner here. Dewey's talk will be broadcast nationally. Speakers at the New York meeting, in addition to Willkie, will include Clare Luce and Bruce Barton.

Senators scheduled to speak on the same evening include Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, at Harrisonburg, Va.; Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, at Brooklyn, N. Y.; Senator Ralph Brewster, of Maine, at Boston, Mass.; Senator Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire, at Akron, Ohio; Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, at Worcester, Mass.; and Senator Harold H. Burton, of Ohio, at Pontiac, Mich.

Republicans from the House to speak include Representatives Everett Dirksen, of Illinois, at Flint, Mich.; Albert Vreeland, of New Jersey, at Cumberland, Md.; Karl Mundt, of South Dakota, at Hagerstown, Md.; Dewey Short, of Missouri, at Independence, Kans., and Charles Dewey, of Illinois, at Portland, Me.

Republican Governors to mount Lincoln Day rostrums include Govs. Dwight Griswold, of Nebraska, speaking at Oklahoma City, Okla.; Harlan J. Bushfield, of South Dakota, at Columbus, and Ralph Carr, Colorado, at Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. Butler Told Nazis Must Try Invasion Soon

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler said today a confidential report to him from abroad indicated that Germany would have to make an "early attempt to invade Great Britain in the hope of bringing the war to an end by an outstanding victory" if the present deadlock continued and efforts to develop Axis power in eastern Europe failed.

The statement by the head of Columbia University was issued through Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, of which he is president.

Jewish Leaders Here Indorse Aid to Britain

Sixteen hundred Jewish leaders closed a two-day National Conference for Palestine here last night after indorsing "all-out" aid to England and calling for an end to the British "appeasement policy" of restricting immigration into the Holy Land.

They heard House Majority Leader John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, declare that the democratic nations must make the establishment of a Jewish National Home "an integral part" of their war aims.

McCormack spoke last night to a banquet in the Willard ballroom, where all through the day speaker after speaker arose to denounce Britain's failure to grant entrance to Palestine to thousands of "poor, helpless refugees" who seek sanctuary there.

But all, despite their sharp criticism, linked the future of Palestine, as well as the future of democracy elsewhere in the world, to a British victory over Hitler Germany.

The conference was sponsored by the United Palestine Appeal. It launched a national drive for $12,000,000 to develop Palestine as a haven for victims of persecution and a home for dispossessed war refugees. Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, was elected national chairman of the campaign yesterday.

The delegates, packed tightly into the huge ballroom, voted a resolution which:

Gave "unqualified indorsement" to the United States' policy of "extending maximum aid to Great Britain and its Allies";

Appealed to the British government to end the "injustice" of restrictions on Jewish immigration and land purchase in Palestine.

Called for the "establishment of Palestine as a Jewish Commonwealth" after the war;

Expressed the hope that an Allied victory would result permanently in "equal rights for Jews in all countries where they reside"; and

Declared that the Jews in Palestine are anxious to contribute to Britain's war effort by organizing a Jewish Near Eastern army.

It was this spirit in the conference that led to vigorous applause when Representative McCormack said that the Palestine mandate granted to Britain by the League of Nations demands the lifting of all restrictions upon Jewish colonization.

"It is well to point out that appeasement in Jerusalem is no less wrong than appeasement in Munich," he said.

Earlier in the day, the delegates heard Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt state that Palestine and the United States must "be prepared to instill new faith in every nation" by constructive activity after the war.

He said the ideals underlying the reconstruction of the Jewish national home in Palestine are shared by the people of Holland, Denmark, Belgium, Norway, Poland and France, and "most of all, they are identical with the ideals embodied in our own Constitution."

"The faith and courage with which homeless Jews, stripped of their possessions, started life anew in Palestine, constitute an inspiration for all men who have been deprived of their individual rights and freedom," he said.

Dr. Silver, after his election as president, insisted that England's restrictive policy in Palestine is dictated by unwillingness to "displease the Arabs of Palestine or arouse the resentment of neighboring Moslem countries."

He said that the American people are risking involvement in the war to aid England and asked:

"Is England to risk nothing for others in carrying out definitely assumed obligations? Is the disastrous appeasement policy of the former British leaders which plunged England into this most dangerous war still to plague Israel in Palestine?"

Dr. Bernard Joseph, Palestine's attorney general, who flew to the United States across the Pacific to report to the conference, revealed that 136,000 men and women in Palestine had registered for emergency defense and war service and that 8,000 Jews are serving in the British forces there.

Prof. Albert Einstein and Gov. Herbert Lehman, of New York, were among the honorary chairmen of the campaign chosen yesterday. Other officers included Rabbi Isadore Breslau, Edmund I. Kaufman and Isadore Hershfield, all of Washington.

to make substantial capital improvements at institutions they intend to scrap within a few years.

The present plan calls for scrapping the Home for the Aged and Infirm, the National Training School for Girls, the white and colored Industrial Home Schools.

But there's many a slip between a plan and an appropriation, as Earle W. Cassie, superintendent of the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin Avenue, can testify. When he took the job 18 years ago the Commissioners told him not to worry about improving the then old dormitories. New ones were to be built at once.

$70,000 Unit Planned

Cassie was optimistic until his farm director disillusioned him.

"They told me the same thing when I came here 22 years ago," the farm director told him.

The 1942 budget estimates, now before Congress, carry $70,000 for the acquisition of a site and the preparation of plans for a welfare center either in nearby Maryland or Virginia.

The center, according to Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy, would cover approximately 1,000 acres. Each of the four institutions would be maintained separately and at a suitable distance apart, but they would draw on common heating and power plants, utilities, storage and farm and dairy facilities.

The consolidation, Bondy said, would enable the Welfare Department to provide better medical services and educational training than is now available. He predicted that economies could be effected by the central heating and power plant and other utility services.

Construction of new plants for the four institutions will cose from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000. Consequently, it obviously cannot be built all at once. Welfare officials hope to set up one institution at a time over a five-year period.

The plan may run into difficulties even before construction begins. Some veteran social welfare workers question the advisability of placing institutions as diverse as the Home for the Aged and the National Training School for Girls in the same vicinity. It probably will be difficult to find as large a plot of ground as needed without going rather far from the Capital.

There is no question, however, that it would be advisable to remove the four institutions concerned out of the present locations. The Industrial Home School and the National Training School for Girls are in growing residential areas, while the two institutions at Blue Plains are unpleasantly close to the District's sewage disposal plant.

Chairman Mahon of the House sub-committee on District appropriations stated following his appointment that he considers this an uneconomical time to make anything but the most essential capital improvements because of rising labor and material costs.

After approving the initial welfare center estimate, the Commissioners eliminated all new construction asked by the department for the four institutions and curtailed the amounts asked for repairs.

Unfortunately, the welfare budget has been held down so rigorously in recent years that no provision has been made for adequate research and investigation. Consequently, there is the danger that the District may build another Muirkirk—now abandoned to the CCC camp.

One of the most hopeful signs for general reform among the welfare institutions themselves, regardless of whether they are moved at once, is the manner in which Conrad Van Hyning, who on July 1 became an assistant to Bondy, has tackled their problems first hand.

In past years, before Mrs. Roosevelt took an interest in them, the welfare institutions often went unvisited even by the welfare director, not to mention the commissioners, for years at a stretch.

Van Hyning has been assigned the task of keeping constant check on them and already has effected numerous improvements. But, as is too often typical of District budgetary stinginess, he is not furnished a car or transportation expenses. He consequently uses his own auto and buys his own gas whenever institutional cars are not available, which is often.

FBI Questions 2 In U.S. File Theft

"It's being done all the time."

On the other hand, it was suggested that information contained in the 750,000 lists in question might prove of value to a foreign power considering possible future war with the United States. Some of the reports bared the fact that low-paid employes handled confidential matter concerning certain aspects of the national defense.

The F. B. I. undertook the investigation at the request of Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, and Arthur S. Flemming, commission member, after a hurried conference. Mitchell said the case was referred to the F. B. I. for "appropriate action" since "there is a possibility of violation of criminal statutes."

It was learned there is no law under which anyone could be punished for removing such documents because of their "confidential" nature or because of their importance. If any illegal act could be established, it was said, it might be that only a technical charge based on the monetary value of the actual paper removed could be brought.

The records involved were personnel information sheets which 750,000 Federal employes were asked to fill out voluntarily six months ago. Federal employes in all the departments and agencies except the Post-office Department were canvassed mission has received returns from by such personnel sheets. The com- about 600,000 employes and the project was far from complete.

Object of the project was to record the qualifications of nearly every Federal employe in a central file. A master list will be established eventually. It will be used extensively, officials believe to fill national defense jobs with persons already in Federal service and who have special skills.

The commission has tried unsuccessfully for years to get money from Congress for such a project. Funds were transferred to the commission for the job last summer by President Roosevelt from the $134,000,000 he received from Congress for national defense work.

The commission built up a staff of more than 600 temporary employes to code and tabulate the questionnaires. It was believed at the time—early last summer—that the project would last about six months.

However, returns were slower than had been anticipated and after several weeks some 300 employes were dismissed. Separation of some of the employes caused the commission considerable trouble.

The returns came in at the Civil Service headquarters at Ninth and F Streets Northwest. They were sent to the old Barber & Ross Building at Eleventh and G Streets Northwest where the coding was done. The files are said to have been stolen from the old Barber & Ross Building where the commission occupies the second and third floors. A hurried check yesterday at headquarters revealed that all the records there were intact.

However, only a few thousand were on file at headquarters, as the transfer of personnel sheets from the old Barber & Ross Building was started only a week ago. The sheets are being placed on punch cards at headquarters. A person could be located immediately with virtually any combination of qualifications which might be needed, under the punch card system. Only about 150 of the original 600 employes remain.

Only one guard is stationed at the old Barber & Ross Building. He is on the ground floor, where the commission has no offices. The commission plans to move its offices out of the old Barber & Ross Building into the Atlantic Building in the 900 block of F Street.

The personnel information project is under the commission's examining division. Directly in charge of the job were Ross Pollock and William P. Lehman.

Some employes objected to filling out the personnel questionnaires. A number of women, for example, came to the commission direct to fill in their ages on the sheets rather than give their section chiefs a chance to see.

The Justice Department already has encountered one stumbling block in its investigation. That appeared to be the lack of a specific law to cover the case. It is pointed out that if the person in whose custody the records were placed willingly "loaned" them, no crime has been committed.

PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY BANQUET music will be directed by Bill Strickland, of the Lotus, who has assembled an 11-man orchestra for this event in the Willard Hotel's ballroom. Bill will duck out of the Lotus for the duration of the pre-Birthday Ball banquet, return in plenty of time for the midnight floor show. Both Deanna Durbin and Kitty Carlisle are due to sing at the Willard party. This engagement will be put down in Leader Strickland's book of historic memories along with the times he played for the Hoover-Curtis inaugural, the French Embassy and Press Club parties for Laval, then Premier of France, and the bicentennial of famed Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria.

El Patio will present Jeanne and Joe Rose, musical comedy entertainers, and Capt. Nick Hope, society accordionist, for the first time this evening. It's a sparking threesome, should be greeted with cheers by El Patioteers.

GROUCHO, HARPO AND THE PRINCESS. Mirth and Mack, who do one of the best impressions of Groucho and Harpo Marx on record, and Princess Red Rock, full blood Alaskan Indian singer, will contend for top honors in the new Shoreham revue opening today. Mirth and Mack were discovered and launched by Rudy Vallee. Princess Red Rock's father was an Ojibway who served as guide for Carnegie Institution expeditions and for George Eastman, the great camera tycoon. Her mother belonged to the Nokamichini tribe. Dancing end of the revue will be taken care of by luscious Talia and ballroom steppers St. Clair and Durand.

TWO LOVELY VIENNESE will head the Troika revue. Charlott, newest protege of Mrs. Roosevelt, opens a singing engagement there tomorrow evening. And Troika's society lark, Patricia Prochnik, is also legally an Austrian, since she was born in the Austrian Legation in Washington . . . Charlott is booked to sing with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra at Carnegie Hall early in February.

BOOMSA-DAISY — IN QUANTITY is being stirred up at the Casino Royal. The customers fairly fall over themselves for the chance to boom-sa with the saucy Chester Daugherty Dancers—are rewarded with the romp of their lives while ringsiders laugh themselves into spasms. A special string of orchids should go to Roland and Reid, whose Viennese waltzing and Swiss dances are replete with gayety and finesse. Marjorie Johnson whips up a beautiful dish of acrodancing and emcee Bob Preble is in his best warbling form.

Louise Latour, attractive new psychic and crystallogist in the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room, was under bombing in London just a few weeks ago, tells a thrilling first-hand tale of British fortitude.

SPANGLES are getting a great play in the costumes of some of our smartest canaries . . . Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, looks sleek as a blackbird in a jacket of black spangles with a little round collar that she wears over a slim black pleated skirt . . . Carmele Lazari, of the Hi Hat, wears black with a flashing collar and pocket of gold spangles . . . Most brilliant effect of all is achieved by Mayfair's Adele Van, who wears a black velvet jacket encrusted with gold spangles over a red evening dress.

Sensitive Guido, of the Rainbow Room, stares at the backs of your hands, then tells you definitely what 1941 holds in store.

Contract Bridge

From failure to success is the story of today's hand, which features imaginative defense by Ralph Gresham, of East Orange, who, with Mrs. John D. Wareing, of Maplewood, won the nonmasters' game at last year's Metropolitan tournament. Gresham was sitting East against South's three no-trump contract at one of the final boards of the event. Winning the lead through a finesse, he quickly shifted suits, returning the only card, an honor, which would smash declarer's stopper and develop the suit immediately. Here is how East describes the hand he managed to defeat so skilfully:

"After taking the opening lead with the spade ace, declarer led the diamond queen and finessed. My king winning, I was on lead. I declared that a heart return was imperative—but which one? Declarer could have three to the king, queen, three to the king or three to the queen. If he held three to the queen and partner had king, nine, small, we could take four heart tricks, provided the jack was led first.

"There was nothing to lose and everything to gain, so I led the jack. Declarer covered with the queen and lost to the king. My partner returned the nine, and dummy covered, hoping West had the eight, which would block the suit. I, of course, held the eight, and we were able to take four heart tricks and a diamond to set the contract which otherwise was 'ice cold.'

"While I may be a hero on this hand, you should see me mess up some others. But they are the kind that never reach the papers, I hope."

Lutherans Open Mission Drive

Sermons and special services in local and nearby Lutheran churches yesterday fired the opening gun in the annual Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Roll Call. The drive, continuing through February 14, has a goal of $7,277.

At Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, made an appeal for the drive's support, saying that the society's project "demonstrates religion of the helping hand, because it goes down into places not reached by ordinary channels."

Pastors of Reformation, Atonement, Grace, Christ, Augustana, Georgetown, St. Paul's, St. Stephen's, Keller Memorial, Takoma, Incarnation, Zion, St. Matthew's and other Lutheran congregations made similar appeals for aid to the Inner Mission.

Japanese Start Fourth Attempt Toward Han River

Shanghai, Jan. 26 (AP).—Domei, Japanese news agency, reported tonight a Japanese army had launched an offensive in central China to crush 100,000 Chinese soldiers operating between the Peiping-Hankow Railway and the Han River.

The Japanese, operating in ten columns, were said to have pierced the first Chinese lines. The offensive was launched from Singyang, Honan province.

It was the fourth major Japanese offensive in the Honan and Hupeh province area within 20 months. So far the Japanese have failed to cross the Han River, each time being forced to return to their bases.

Foreign military observers said the last Japanese operations in that vast interior zone ended in Chinese victory last October. These sources said Japanese casualties numbered 15,000 and 20,000.

Sinclair Lewis Quits Footlights

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 26 (AP).—Sinclair Lewis, saying a reluctant farewell to footlights and grease paint, today turned to planning a new novel.

Lewis' acting career, started three years ago, ended after he had played the leading role of Dr. Hilary Jerrett in his own play, "Angela is 22," during a week's run here that terminated with tonight's performance.

Lewis said he expects to begin work on the novel when he returns to New York in a few days.

2 Senators to Address Patriotic Societies

Alexandrians Plan Trainee Entertainment

Confronted with the task of furnishing entertainment and recreation for some 3,000 trainees who are expected to come to Alexandria on week-ends from their training base at nearby Fort Belvoir, city officials, the chamber of commerce and a number of civic organizations are working together on the problem.

Representatives of Fort Belvoir told the chamber of commerce that 2,000 selectees will be in training at the fort by March 15, with the possibility that the number may be doubled within a short period. Unless some provisions are made in Alexandria, the nearest city to the training site, the community may find itself "swamped" on weekends, Army officials have warned.

The Council of Social Agencies announced it will appoint a committee of 15 Alexandrians to investigate means of furnishing entertainment for the selectees.

The Trinity Methodist Church will create a soldiers' club and the Volunteers of America and the Salvation Army also are making plans to help.

Junior Chamber To Hear Jail Report

Reports of a survey of conditions at the Alexandria jail will be submitted to members of the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce tonight at 7 in the Penn Daw Hotel by a special committee.

The committee, headed by Edmund Cole, has inspected the jail on several occasions in the last six weeks, and has prepared a number of recommendations in connection with the improvement program, which has been planned as one of the Junior Chamber's 1941 objectives.

One of the factors which led to the survey was a report by John W. Monroe, jr., clerk of the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, who told members of the Junior Chamber that Federal prisoners were not permitted to remain in the city jail for more than five days because it was not approved by the Federal Prison Commission. Monroe is a member of the committee, along with John P. Strauss, Cary Blackwell and Chairman Cole.

U. of Va. Students Set Up Loan Fund

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 26.—A loan fund probably unique among American universities has been set up at the University of Virginia.

It is established and maintained by self-help students who have looked beyond their own need to the necessities of others. These students contribute each month a certain share of their earnings to an honors loan fund, to be used in emergency by someone whose need is greater than their own.

The terms of the gifts stipulate that the money is to be lent without security, without interest and for an indefinite time. The only security is a pledge of honor.

Jealousy-Crazed Man, 29, Attacks, Slays Sweetheart

Fugitive From Asylum Confesses Killing To Clergyman

By the United Press

Kankakee, Ill., Jan. 26.—A 29-year-old factory worker, brought to jail by a minister to whom he first told his story, confessed today that he killed his 22-year-old sweetheart last night because he was jealous of another suitor and believed she would "be better off in God's hands."

State's Attorney Joseph Tolson announced that the young man, Omar Longtin, Bradley, Ill., had dictated a statement admitting he criminally assaulted the girl, Norma Altenbrunn, Kankakee, and then stabbed her.

A few hours after Tolson obtained the confession, he learned that Longtin is an escaped fugitive from the Kankakee State Asylum.

The girl's body was found in a lot near her home by a searching party including her father, George; her brother, Leonard; and her slayer's brother, Arthur Longtin.

The slayer was brought to jail early today by the Rev. H. C. Short, pastor of the Bradley United Brethren Church, to whom he had gone for advice after the slaying.

In his statement, made to Tolson and Sheriff Dan Bergan, Longtin said he had taken the girl to a movie and then to his home at Bradley, where his mother fixed a lunch for them.

He said he had been brooding because the girl's parents objected to him and because another young man had been taking her out. When he left to take the girl home, he carried a breadknife from his mother's kitchen. Near the lot, he struck the girl with a brick, attacked her, then stabbed her. He said he then went home and told his mother "something had happened."

He started to get his rifle to kill himself, he said, but his courage failed him. Then he went to the Rev. Mr. Short.

"Norma's parents were overworking her and she was too good for him (the other suitor)," Longtin was quoted. "She's better off in God's hands."

Colored Protest 'Discrimination' By Military

A Nation-wide protest by the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, complaining of discrimination against colored citizens in the armed forces, was the basis for a mass meeting yesterday at Metropolitan Church.

Dr. Charles Edward Russell, author and journalist, said the meeting was called to turn attention of the puublic to the "available reservoir of valuable man power within our fellow-American Negro citizenry."

"Equal justice under law" was discussed by Representative John M. Robison (Republican), of Kentucky. He urged removal of all limitation on participation of citizens in the Government, including disfranchisement here, and poll-tax laws in various parts of the South.

Loyalty of the Negro to America was likened by Eugene Davidson, administrator of the New Negro Alliance, as loyalty to the ideals of the Declaration of Independence. Other speakers were Dr. Charles H. Houston, Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, and the Rev. R. W. Brooks.

Church Honors 7 First Members Of Sunday School

Seven persons who joined the original Sunday school of Memorial United Brethren Church back in the '90's were honored yesterday at the climaxing services of the church's forty-eighth anniversary celebration. Six other original members were honored in absentia.

The septet who took charge of yesterday's church school services were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Browning, Mrs. Effie Herring, sister of Browning; William Spies, son of the first Sunday school superintendent; Calvin Lucas and Mrs. Carrie Calbreth, Lucas' sister, and William Holtman, jr.

The others—prevented through illness and other causes from being present for the services—were Maud and Edwin Spies, brother and sister of William Spies; Mrs. Elizabeth Holtman, mother of William; Walter Kern, son of the late Edward Kern, who supervised the building of the original chapel; Nelson Browning, brother of Albert, and Miss Rose Parker.

Paying tribute to the church's founders in his sermon at the morning worship rites, Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty, pastor, urged worshippers to "keep their souls young."

Gorilla Awaiting Bride in New Cage

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Gargantua the Great, giant circus gorilla, slept tonight in the new air-conditioned cage soon to be occupied by Toto, his bride-to-be.

Gargantua explored the new glass and steel cage from top to bottom, pounded on the walls, then spread an army blanket on the floor and went to sleep. The new cage, which weighs nearly 10 tons, was built of two thicknesses of shatterproof glass, with steel bars an inch in diameter 4 inches apart.

Lists Open For Hyattsville Metal Training

Applications for training courses in aircraft sheet metal work and welding will be received at the Hyattsville Employment Office, beginning today and continuing through February 1, it was announced yesterday.

The courses will start February 3 at the Hyatisville High School and will be a continuation of the defense industry training program launched in the county last summer. Applicants must be 18 years of age and must agree to accept positions in defense industries on completion of the course.

Classes will be held eight hours a night from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m., five nights a week for an eight-week period. Claude Gaylor, head of the employment office, said there was a big demand in industries for aircraft sheet-metal workers.

Other courses in trades essential to the rearmament program will be given for young men between 17 and 24 if there is sufficient demand, Gaylor said. The following centers are available for instruction: Marlboro High School, Laurel High School, Oxon Hill High School, Surrattsville High School, Mount Rainier High School and Maryland Park High School.

These classes would be held three hours a night on Mondays and Wednesdays and nine hours on Saturdays. Applicants should enroll with the principal of the high school where they wish to take their instruction. Registration for these classes will close February 1. No fees will be charged for the instruction.

Seabrook Leader Opposes Weller's Reappointment

John Riggles, president of the Seabrook (Md.) Citizens Association, said last night he had written to Gov. O'Conor to oppose reappointment of O. E. Weller, chairman of the Maryland public service commission.

Riggles accused the public service commission of failing to give the Seabrook Citizens Association an opportunity to be heard on its protest against the application of the Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. to issue $12,000,000 in bonds.

Riggles said the association was notified of a hearing on the application after it had been held on January 13.

C. J. Howell Dies In Pennsylvania

Clarence J. Howell, son of Mrs. Charles W. Howell and the late Mr. Howell, of Alexandria, and a former resident of that city, died late Saturday night at his home in Abingdon, Pa., of pneumonia.

Mr. Howell is survived by his wife, Elizabeth R., and a son, Charles W., of Abingdon; four sisters, Mrs. J. T. Buchalter of Savannah, Ga., Mrs. M. E. Sawyer of Norfolk, and Mrs. Elliott F. Hoffman and Miss Rosina Howell, both of Alexandria; and two brothers, Charles S. and Bedford F., also of Alexandria.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

Catholic Group Reelects Mason

Frank Mason has been elected president of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria, for the second successive year. Other new officers are M. J. Barrett, vice president, also reelected; Roland Springborn, secretary; Sylvester A. Breen, elected treasurer for the thirty-second year, and Herbert A. Cady, marshal. The Rev. Robert Beattie has been reappointed spiritual director.

The president has appointed standing committees for 1941 to include F. H. Nowland and F. H. Fannon, publicity; C. A. West, W. F. Nugent, E. T. Lannon and John DeMarr, entertainment, and F. T. Quinn, R. L. Carne, Carl Rothmund, H. A. Schwarzmann and T. J. McFarland, sick committee.

Two Die in Va. Auto Collision

South Boston, Va., Jan. 26 (AP).—Tucker C. Watkins 3rd, 29, Southside Virginia businessman and president of the last national tobacco festival, was killed here today in an automobile collision which also caused the death of Aubrey Forlines, 19, farmer of Nathalie, Va.

Mrs. Watkins, who was Miss Lillian Williams, daughter of a prominent South Boston tobacconist before her marriage last November, and Julian Hall, 19, of near Halifax, were injured in the accident.

The Watkins car was in collision with that occupied by Forlines and Hall, at a South Boston street intersection.

New Mail Route Interests Philatelists

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 26 (AP).—Stamp collectors and others are sending to the Harrisonburg Postoffice large numbers of letters to be canceled and carried on the first trip of the new highway postoffice bus to be started February 10 between Washington and Harrisonburg as the first route of its kind in the country, Postmaster G. Fred Switzer said tonight.

Switzer has been called to Washington to confer tomorrow with the Postoffice Department on details of the highway postoffice route.

Bishop Freeman Addresses Class At Wilson High

Members of the midyear graduating class of Woodrow Wilson High School yesterday were congratulated by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman for living in what he called an "age of infirmity," which challenges the best in one.

The Bishop of the Washington Diocese of the Episcopal Church cited Beethoven, Pasteur, Milton, Phillips, Brooks, Dante, Victor Hugo and others as examples of men who became great despite infirmities.

Dr. Theodore O. Wedel, canon chancellor of the cathedral, read the lessons at the baccalaureate service, and the full choir of men and boys sang under Organist-Choirmaster Paul Callaway's direction. More than 500 relatives and friends attended.

Norman Davis Gets B'nai B'rith Award For Mercy Work

B'nai B'rith, Jewish national fraternal order, yesterday awarded its ninety-seventh anniversary award to Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross "in recognition of his humanitarian services . . . and his insistence that Red Cross relief supplies . . . be distributed on a completely nonsectarian basis."

The announcement of the award was made here yesterday. Presentation will be made at exercises in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, February 16.

In response, Davis said the award gave emphasis to elements in human relationships that cannot be encouraged too often.

"The great need for human service regardless of race, creed or color, the spirit of brotherhood, of tolerance, understanding and good will were never so important as today," Davis declared.

Takoma Firemen Plan Night Duty

The board of trustees of the Takoma Park (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department will meet at the firehouse tonight to consider appointment of a paid custodian for night duty at the station.

Chief Irving W. Johnson said the deadline for applications would be 8 p. m. when the meeting of the trustees will start. Candidates should be experienced firemen, he stated.

The department has a custodian on duty during the day, but between midnight and 8 a. m. no one is stationed at the firehouse.

Three Birthday Balls Slated in Prince Georges

Mrs. Nelson G. Tayman, of the Prince Georges County Birthday Ball Committee, announced yesterday that dances to raise funds for the infantile paralysis fight will be held at the Beaver Dam Club, the Greenbelt Elementary School and the Old Fireside Inn at T. B.

They will be held as follows: Beaver Dam, Thursday night; Greenbelt, Saturday night, and Old Fireside Inn, February .

Mrs. Tayman has named the following persons as members of the ticket sale committee for Thursday's dance:

Mrs. Elmer C. Mayberry, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Collins, B. K. Miller, Thomas Gwynn, J. Frank Dent, Aaron Horowitz, Mrs. R. M. Watson, Lieut. Thomas Murphy, J. Protestants Begin Christian Mission Preparations

Addresses stressing that "Christ Has the Answer" to modern problems launched spiritual preparations for the National Christian Mission yesterday in local and nearby Protestant churches. It comes here next Sunday from Pittsburgh.

Arthur S. Flemming, Civil Service Commissioner, told an audience last night at Foundry Methodist Church that the Mission would help young people "think through the things that keep them from a vital Christian experience."

Dr. James Shera Montgomery, Chaplain of the House, addressed a "preaching mission" preparatory service for the National Christian Mission at Memorial Methodist Church, Hyattsville.

Gen. Bisbee, 4-War Veteran, Is 101 Tomorrow

Brig. Gen. William H. Bisbee (retired), who fought in four of the Nation's wars and rose through the ranks from private, was congratulated yesterday by the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff on the approach of his 101st birthday. Gen. Bisbee will be 101 tomorrow.

Gen. Bisbee, who lives in Brookline, Mass., received the decoration of the Order of the Purple Heart, established by George Washington for "extraordinary performance of duty," last year on his 100th birthday.

Entering the Army during the Civil War at the age of 21, he was commissioned second lieutenant by President Lincoln. From the end of that conflict, until his retirement in 1902, Gen. Bisbee fought in the Indian Wars, the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection. He was commissioned brigadier general by President Theodore Roosevelt.

Hitch-Hiker Lawsuit Bill Passage Forecast

Salisbury, Md., Jan. 26 (AP).—Howard Johnson, Wicomico County Representative in the House of Delegates, said today he was confident of passage of his bill to protect automobile drivers from hitchhikers' civil suits.

The bill, which Johnson said had reached the judiciary committee, provides that persons riding in a car operated by another without paying for passage have no recourse to law for recovery from the driver in case of accident.

Mrs. Wilson to Review Current Books

Mrs. Charles Wilson will review several books on current literature today at the book chat of the Takoma Park Library, 8 Sherman Avenue, at 8 p. m. The reviews will include "My Name Is Aram," by Saroyam, "From Many Lands," by Adamic and "Land of the Eye," by Davis. Excerpts will be read from Govan's "Wings at My Window," by Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, librarian.

Montgomery To Hear Debate On Bear Sales

County monopoly of wholesale beer sales, as advocated by the County Congress of the United Democratic Organization, is expected to be the main item of debate at a special meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation tonight at Bethesda Elementary School at 8 o'clock.

The proposal is being fought bitterly by the wholesale beer dealers of the State and produced considerable debate at the County Congress meeting last week. James W. Gill, member of the House of Delegates and counsel to the Liquor Control Board, and J. Forest Walker, chairman of the liquor board, have advocated the resumption of control lost two years ago when wholesale licenses went to court to ban county control.

Another item expected to result in considerable wrangling is the proposed 100 per cent increase in the county public health budget which is advocated by the Public Health Lay Council and the health department. The increase has been attacked bitterly by the Montgomery County Farm Bureau, and other groups of the county are lukewarm to the total increase although willing to countenance a "reasonable" increase.

Because of the importance of the Civic Federation meeting tonight, the meeting of the Allied Civic Groups of Silver Spring, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed until tomorrow at 8 p. m. to enable members of the Silver Spring assembly who are delegates to the federation to take part in the debate.

We Sanitary store folks are changing our name

WE'VE lived here and done business and made friends under the Sanitary name since away back when. For years and years our Sanitary Stores have been part of this community.

And now we are to have a new name—SAFEWAY.

Nothing else about us is changing at all. Same ownership. We'll still be the same people, operating in the same locations. We'll still offer you the same fine foods, farm-fresh produce and guaranteed meats.

And we'll still be offering you money-savings every day because our stores will continue to be chain stores, distributing foods directly.

Our new name—SAFEWAY—is the name of the parent organization to which Sanitary Stores have long belonged. It will simplify our business records to be known as SAFEWAY Stores.

Our new name is going up on the front of our stores. And our regular food advertisements in the newspapers this weekend will carry the SAFEWAY name. It will look like this:

SAFEWAY

We're publishing this message just so you won't be inconvenienced when we change our name. SAFEWAY is a name that's sort of friendly-like and easy to get used to, don't you think?

Your SANITARY Grocer . . . who from now on is your SAFEWAY Grocer

Business Or Racket?

A crying need of the District is emphasized by the controversy in the New York Legislature over reducing the maximum interest on small loans. At present the highest interest permitted in New York State is 3 per cent a month. Under a bill sponsored by Gov. Lehman, the limit would be lowered to 2½ per cent. The law in the District allows interest of only 1 per cent a month on small loans. Is the National Capital, then, to congratulate itself on its protection against usury? Such is the delusion entertained by a large part of the public, and, unluckily, by some members of Congress. But the facts are just the opposite.

The lesson to be drawn from the argument in the New York Assembly is clear. Those for keeping the 3 per cent rate say that small loan companies cannot operate profitably at a lower rate, and that if they are driven out of business, persons in straitened circumstances will borrow from loan sharks who take a toll many times as high. Gov. Lehman's supporters quote surveys and cite offers of licensees to prove that a 2½ per cent rate is workable. It is noteworthy that no comprehensive study anywhere recommends any such rate as 1 per cent. The original recommendation of the Russell Sage Foundation was for 3½ per cent a month on unpaid balances.

All efforts to enforce the District law of 1913 have failed. The fact that there is only one licensed small-loan agency here is eloquent. It means that many borrowers have to go into Maryland and Virginia where lenders are licensed to operate at rates which permit them to stay in business. Much worse, it means that many are victimized by unlicensed agencies which force borrowers to pay as much as 30 per cent a month when they can offer no collateral.

Because of misunderstanding and lethargy, the fight to enact a practical small-loan law in the District has been a losing one for 12 years. The annual struggle is now under way once more. Representative Nichols has reintroduced his bill for regulation of lenders at a rate of interest that would permit them to obey the law and continue in business. The Corporation Counsel's staff, at the request of the Commissioners, is drafting a measure for the same purpose. Is it to be 2½ per cent interest every month for borrowers in desperate circumstances or 30 per cent? The vigor with which these bills are advanced will decide the issue for another year.

Radio Self-Censorship

Congress, in specifically denying censorship powers over radio to the Federal Communications Commission, at the same time forbade the FCC to promulgate any rule "which shall interfere with the right of free speech by means of radio communication." Yet the commission is charged with the responsibility of regulating radio in the public interest. Exercise of this power, in consequence, necessarily requires the FCC in some measure to pass judgment upon the type of programs presented by the broadcasters.

The line between censorship and regulation in the public interest may be tortuous and difficult to find. Yet the FCC must face the task, and, in doing so, it appears to be developing reasonably satisfactory guide lines. It says to the broadcasters, in effect: "The FCC can't censor your programs, but you must censor them in the public interest if you expect to have your licenses renewed." The most recent rule laid down in pursuance of this policy is that no broadcaster may become an advocate, but each must present "all sides of important public questions fairly, objectively and without bias."

Accordingly Station WAAB of Boston has been reprimanded by the commission for broadcasting editorials designed to win public support for candidates and opinions favored by the operator. WAAB's license was renewed only after it had pledged itself not to "color" news in the future. "Radio can serve as an instrument of democracy," the commission pointed out, "only when devoted to the communication of information and the exchange of ideas fairly and objectively presented." In short, a monopolistic agency such as radio should have no editorial policy. The FCC's conclusion thus sharpens the distinction between radio and the press. The channels through which broadcasts reach our homes are definitely limited. To permit exclusive use of those limited facilities to serve personal ends or partisan purposes would be grossly unfair to those whose views cannot thus be presented. By contrast, anyone has access to the printing press to set forth his views.

There can be little doubt as to the desirability of the rule which the FCC has adopted. It is not to be supposed that any broadcaster will attain complete objectivity in his choice of speakers and commentators. But the difficulty of attaining absolutely fair use of public facilities is no excuse for failure to strive for it. The FCC has put broadcasters on notice that their stations must serve the public interest in the broad sense of that term. The fact that the record of each broadcaster will be scrutinized for biased advocacy of any cause each year when he seeks renewal of his license will be a powerful aid to successful self-censorship.

Inside Italy

On tens of thousands of Italian walls all the way from the Brenner Pass to the southern shores of Sicily are inscribed the propagandist slogans of Fascismo accompanied in many cases by a silhouette of the beetling brow and jutting jaw of the Duce. "Mussolini," says one of the most common of these slogans, "is always right!" "Believe! Obey! Fight!" says another. Recent events have made a mockery of these admonitions, and the Italians, being a logical people, cannot help but read them as though they ended not with exclamation points but with question marks. To believe that "Mussolini is always right" is to blind one's eyes to the unpleasant facts regarding the disasters which have befallen Italian troops in Greece, Albania, Egypt and Libya. To obey the Duce means to follow the lead of one who has proved himself blind to realities, a man who in an international poker game for enormous stakes tried to bluff with a pair of deuces. To fight means merely to help bring about a German victory and thus bind Italy's subjection to a nation the Italians detest.

It is thus not difficult to believe Belgrade reports that riots have broken out in northern Italy, particularly in view of the disturbances which occurred in this region on the heels of the first Hitler-Stalin pact; or that German troops have moved in across the Brenner to restore order. For if the Italians are sick to death of a war they did not want, Hitler cannot afford to let them quit, because Italy's elimination would deal a damaging blow to the Third Reich.

It is not yet clear how widespread is the civil disorder. But the fact is incontrovertible that Italy must have been made ripe for dissension by the events of the last two weeks which have seen British forces in Africa capturing Bardia, Tobruk and threatening Derna and Bengazi. At this rate the ultimate destruction of Graziani's army may not be far off. So difficult has it been to keep the Italians from knowing about disasters which began last November in Albania that the Fascist propaganda machine has had to give up the task of suppressing the news. It has had to content itself with making the point that the Italians were in each case outnumbered five to one. Yet, even if some Italians are persuaded to believe this fiction, the trail of defeat cannot help but infuriate them with a leadership which was reckless enough to place Italian forces in so hopeless a position.

We may take it for granted that if civil disorders spread in the peninsula, large-scale German intervention will follow, if it has not already been undertaken. But that will only emphasize to the Italian people how much of a tool of Hitler the Duce has become. And if Hitler is strong enough, by such tactics, to prevent an Italian government from making a separate peace he may, by the same token, reduce to the vanishing point Italy's willingness to continue fighting. Captives make poor fighters.

Lumber Out Of Line

Leon Henderson, defense commissioner in charge of price stabilization, has delivered an ultimatum to the lumber industry. If prices are not speedily reduced to a reasonable level, he intends to recommend the taking of lumber for Government use at prices fixed by the Commander-in-Chief of the Army. The sharp advance in prices is primarily due to concentrated defense demands superimposed upon other demands which have caused current shipments of lumber to outstrip current output, though lumber production in 1940 was the highest since 1929. The Department of Commerce points out that the demand for lumber for construction of barracks came at a time when private building was at the highest level in 10 years and mill stocks of lumber comparatively low. The need for certain softwoods for the building of cantonments in the southeastern part of the country was especially great, with the result that prices of suitable woods skyrocketed. Furthermore, the price advance was aggravated because Government buying was not coordinated, and the placement of individual orders caused defense requirements to be overestimated.

Judged by the standards of the market place, in which prices reflect changed relationships between demand and supply, the extreme rise in lumber prices in recent months may seem justified. But, as Mr. Henderson points out, the country would be in a state of paralysis and the defense program stalled, if the whole price level had kept pace with the rise in lumber. Some grades of lumber are over 50 per cent above the low level of 1940, while average prices for 42 different types are 26 per cent higher. The national emergency has made it necessary to substitute price control for competitively determined prices whenever the situation gets out of hand, as it evidently has in case of lumber. That requires the setting up of some standard of reasonableness, unrelated or only remotely related to demand and supply factors.

For this purpose the Defense Commission harks back to June of last year when the industry was fairly prosperous, but not yet feeling the effects of the defense boom. Prices that were yielding a fair profit to producers then, are being used to test the reasonableness of present prices, with allowances for subsequent increases in wage and handling costs. In other words, costs of production (including fair profits to the producer) have become the Government's test of the reasonableness of prices. Once this principle of price fixation is accepted by the industry, it should be possible to reach an agreement on price schedules, especially as the industry is confronted by a very unpleasant alternative should it refuse to cooperate.

Nationalizing Noises

Dr. Leopold Stokowski, it seems, will soon be off to Fort MacArthur, Calif., where he will work out his scheme to "remove foreign characteristics" from our military music and thus, according to a War Department announcement, make it more conducive of "esprit"—a word from which the foreign influence, alas, has not yet been fully expunged. Just how Dr. Stokowski proposes to make martial music "typically American" is not disclosed. The War Department says it is to be done through "reinstrumentation and rescoring." But it can hardly be that Dr. Stokowski means to scrap the traditional band instruments, which are all (except the drums, which seem to be universal) of undeniably foreign origin. The experiment is to begin with an 85-piece band, but it seems unlikely that Dr. Stokowski intends to rehearse his boys in music scored for fine-tooth combs, rubber-band zithers, quart-bottle celestas, washboards and so on, though that, undeniably, would be an interesting experiment. For that matter, to judge from his previous exploits, anything that Dr. Stokowski may decide to do is certain to be interesting.

But the truth is that the music that can be considered most "typically American" (that is to say, folk music), consists in large part of European heritages preserved more or less intact through generations. Of this those who have attended the National Folk Festivals are aware. There are many ways of carrying nationalism to the point of nonsense and music would seem to be one of them. If Dr. Stokowski wants to rearrange traditional band music because he thinks by doing so he can get new and livelier effects from it, why, more power to him. But if he and the War Department want to change it merely because they consider it "foreign" or "undemocratic" or "unmechanized" or "pre-Spenglerian" or something of that sort, they are being as silly as the bolsheviks who decreed that "proletarian music" must forthwith be substituted for "bourgeois music." Or as silly as the Wobbly in the story who kept his eyes shut tight during a trip across the Rocky Mountains because he "wasn't going to look at no —— —— dirty capitalistic scenery!"

Multiplication Table

Perturbed by a falling off in the national birth rate, the Japanese government, according to a dispatch from Tokyo, is planning to put the reproductive process on the basis of a national industry. A quota of five children has been established for every Japanese family and an increase of some 33,000,000 by 1960 for the nation. Plans are also in preparation for "improving the quality" of the population, though it is not disclosed by what process this improvement is to be achieved, nor by what standard "quality" is to be measured. The general experience has been that such schemes of national or racial fertility are easy to prepare, but difficult to realize. The Japanese, however, may prove more amenable to governmental direction in such matters than, say, the French. But the interesting point at the moment is that such a scheme should have been conceived in Japan of all places. Until very recently Japanese statesmen talked incessantly about the chronic overpopulation of their islands, and it was their favorite pretext for whatever the Japanese soldiers or police might be up to on the Asiatic mainland.

RED-BIRD IN WINTER

Mark this miraculous blossoming:
This songster on an icy tree,
Throated for Spring:
This flaming bird,
Like fire on frost, that ruddily
Blazes a summer word.

Hark his incautious chord
That pierces Winter's mute
White halls like flame unbarred;
His rapturous flute
That flings, on gallant breath
Challenge to frost, and death.

Speeding Defense

Now that we know England must have airplanes by spring to keep the world safe for Christianity and democracy, why spend millions to build airplane plants that may not be producing until the war is over?

In the last war which made 30,000 millionaires, some dollar-a-year men thought more of their business ties than our Nation's needs, and we trust that will not happen again.

The present bottleneck seems to be either selfishness or greed, for airplane production could be greatly increased by making the best airplanes standard. Then the jigs, dies, gauges, templates and tools now used only about ten minutes a week could be used 24 hours a day, and there would be little need for extra tools.

Instead, new plants are to be built, $30,000,000 is allotted by the RFC to one company to build and equip a plant, the Government guarantees to pay $3,333 over and above the regular price on each of the motors built, the amount to be used to amortize the loan which leaves the company the sole owner of the plant plus the profit.

Another company is allotted $92,000,000 under the same amortization plan to build airplanes.

A certain aircraft engine, considered one of the best in the world, costs from $12,000 to $17,000, according to size. Each part could be farmed out to small machine shops and production could be greatly increased. Yet a contract was given to another company for 1,000 airplane motors at $25,000 each, with no assurance they will be completed before the war is over, or that they will equal the best motors now built.

Behavior At The Opera

My beloved teacher, the late Arthur Bodanzky, once told me that the cultural level of any city can be measured by the behavior of its inhabitants in the concert hall and in the opera house. Judged by that standard, most of the Washingtonians who were at the National Theater to hear a performance of "Madame Butterfly," would be more at home at a burlesque show.

Behind me sat a woman of ample proportions who, throughout the opera, explained the action (and wrongly at that) to her offspring. Not in a whisper, mind you, but with a rich bass voice that would have benefited the bonze on the stage. A couple of young things in front of me kept up a running comment on Hizi Koyke's kimonos, a comment abounding with "cute" and "ravishing." And there was more of that sort all about me.

This is not my first experience with local behavior. My observations only bear out my conviction that Washington, although the Nation's Capital, is the most provincial of all cities in these United States.

It is about time that one of our newspapers publish a course in "behavior at the opera." I cannot see why a man or woman who is a genuine music lover should be disturbed by a bunch of inconsiderate morons who have no idea what it is all about.

Ark Of Freedom

No doubt Noah and his family did not entirely like the ark which was their salvation. It was too limited, too cramped. In entering it they had to leave so many pleasant conveniences behind.

No doubt all free men today would like to see the ark of freedom's salvation less limited and cramped. England is a "tight little isle." And it looks small, indeed, upon the flood of Nazism's wrath. All of which gives abundant reason why we should support the British with everything we have and all the love of freedom in our souls.

To doubt that Britain will win is to divide our hopes and our efforts, and to scatter such in the face of this mighty flood. Our hopes and efforts must prove forlorn as surely as we spread them thin before these wolves. A man dismembered is no man at all; and a nation which is incapable of making a fully united "all or nothing" effort at any point is the perfect answer to Hitler's prayer.

Let us therefore pay no attention to the diminished hopes which still await us if we retreat from "all-out" aid to Britain. Today is the very earliest date at which we can gain our much-needed practice in standing up to the Axis with our souls in our bodies, and with full faith in the god of freedom in our souls.

Lend-Lease Crisis

Never in the history of our Nation have we faced so grave a crisis as we do at this time. If the Congress passes the lend-lease bill, it will have sounded its own death knell. It will have voted itself into obliteration. Since the day the Magna Charta was signed no ruler of any English-speaking people has ever asked for such autocratic power as this bill defines. If we pass it we trample under foot the blood of our forefathers. It shall not pass.

Mr. Kennedy's Testimony To Congress

Just on the face of it, certainly, it appears one of those strange anomolies in which these times abound—that, with every man, woman and child in this country resolved on doing his or her share in the National Defense, linked of necessity so closely to aid to Britain—and while the bill to put the machinery to this end into operation in every part of our land is before Congress—that just at this moment the man who has represented in the British Isles our nation of steel workers, riveters, shipbuilders, carpenters, practical housewives and idealistic young people, should appear to testify confusedly, and not too warmly, on this burning question of American aid to Britain!

But Mr. Kennedy had done his job and done it well. He had also, all in the day's work, been through some 280 air raids. For the stamina of the more-than-ordinary man, certainly, that would be enough. For Mr. Kennedy, evidently, it may well have been just one of the things that proved enough. He returned to this country to retire. A new Ambassador will be appointed. It is left for the rest of us, in humbler positions, also, to carry on. Certain it is that few Americans can ever achieve as fine a record in public service as Mr. Kennedy has had. But in the testimony of Mr. Kennedy in Washington we have, what appears, at best, the testimony of a very tired man.

"What are the war aims of Great Britain?" Mr. Kennedy was asked. His reply, "I am sure I do not know," if sincere, is, at least, confused and disappointing. In one brief word Mr. Churchill answered that question: "Survival." And we who have watched, for many a cruel month, the game and desperate fight of the people of that little island against the accruing size and strength of the enemy, are witness that he spoke truly.

"Great Britain has been able to survive against conquest through control of the seas between those islands and the continent of Europe . . ." and ". . . the struggle now going on is, fundamentally, an attempt by Germany to seize control of the seas from Great Britain." So our own Secretary of the Navy testified only a few days ago. While every American, from the youngest schoolboy up, is well aware that, just as the sea quite surrounds those tiny British Isles, so do the seas bound our own United States on the East and on the West. Our own and Great Britain's control of the seas is, to any thoughtful American, then, vital, not only for Great Britain, our friendly sea-island neighbor, but for ourselves.

"Control of the seas"—cannot these four simple words alone constitute a clear and legitimate war aim, Messrs. Kennedy and Fish? And, as this war aim is identical, for Great Britain, with the strong word "survival," is it not become actually so also for ourselves? For, failing British survival, left with our small one-ocean Navy for patrol, the totalitarian powers are not "two oceans away," as we have liked to maintain, but become, as closely and surely as those shipbearing tides, our own boundaries of East and West.

And yet it is that very clause in the lease-lend bill which might, in emergency, provide aid to that strong arm now guarding our own sea boundary—to which Mr. Kennedy and other patriotic Americans object. We find Mr. Kennedy looking past and beyond this first obvious and practical need to a vague future landing of American armies on the continent of Europe; a contingency which is in no way provided by the lease-lend bill now under discussion—and which, even in the event of the involvement of this country in actual war, might well never arise.

"If," Mr. Kennedy says, "England were to be defeated quickly, and Germany succeed to the British navy, this country now is not prepared to defend its own shores, let alone the North American Continent." (In subsequent testimony he maintained that Germany could never obtain the British fleet—that in the event of the fall of the British Isles the English fleet would either be sunk or sent to patrol duty in other parts of the empire). But in either contingency, we would ask:

What, then, Mr. Kennedy? . . . While you have also stated that you are not to be termed "appeaser" the implication of your argument certainly appears to be, let us now and henceforward so conduct ourselves that the Germans shall have the least cause possible to consider us their potential enemies should these ocean waves bear them, one day, to our door. But this policy has been tried out, Mr. Kennedy, by every democracy in Europe feeling unequal to the task of self-defense . . . and those who have advocated this gentle middle-road dealing have been termed "appeaser." And can we presume that our country—rich, and inadequate in its own defense, would escape the lot of other such countries, not on too unfriendly terms with Nazi Germany? Even though our corroding process might well be slower and accomplished in less forthright ways.

What, then, is our alternative?

Simply to see to it that the sea does not pass out of the control of Great Britain and to undertake for our part whatever cooperation is necessary to this end.

The Post Impressionist

Pog And Mr. Ford

A FRENCHMAN would have called the Pog chat, without a capital, and let it go at that. Truly, Pog was an indifferent tom. His only distinguishing characteristic, as far as I could see, was his unaccountable preference for my society. Such a singular preference certainly called for a suitable name, I thought, and as I was in a Republican mood at the moment I named him Pog, which is the reverse of GOP, as anybody knows.

Pog literally pussyfooted his way into my life. Up the creaky wooden stairway leading from the center of the back yard to my private entrance he came without a sound. The screen door was open, and he entered quietly and with dignity, as one visiting a friend. "Hello," I said foolishly. He glanced up at me without unfriendliness and proceeded to make a thorough inspection of my quarters, as if ascertaining whether they would provide a good home for a feline of fine breeding. He was small, of an uncertain gray, with the faintest suggestion of a black stripe here and there. Something about the fellow completely captivated me, and I thought fondly of adopting him. But the thought perished still-born; for I knew I could not afford to buy food and milk for a cat. I was at that time having almost more than I could do to supply myself with the same necessities. Besides, what would Mr. Ford say?

Mr. Ford was my landlord. Any similarity between him and the Detroit motor magnate is purely coincidental and wouldn't interest either of them. My Mr. Ford hated cats. He said so. He said he detested the things.

Pog called on me in my room almost every day for the next week or so. Each time he arrived unannounced, entered, and made a careful inspection of the premises, paying particular attention to the recess behind the brightly colored cretonne curtains which served as clothes closet. The inspection finally completed, he would come forth and try out his fine young claws on the large new rush mat which covered the floor.

One morning Pog crossed the yard as I started to ascend the stairs to my room. Mr. Ford stepped out of his back door and eyed the cat. Doubtfully I told him about Pog's visits to my place. I told him I was going to see if I couldn't bring in some milk for him. The expected wrath did not ensue. Instead, the old man just looked again at the retreating cat and said nothing.

The next day when I crossed the yard to go out to the front of the house I spied a white saucer of milk on the low porch step by Mr. Ford's door. Thereafter I often noticed the same thing. Pog completely deserted me. He was frequently in the yard, but he never came up to see me.

One afternoon I found my ancient landlord seated at his sewing machine in the middle of the yard, mending sheets, an accustomed sight. Pog was deeply engaged in the business, too—all claws, to be sure, but definitely trying to do, or undo, whatever he could. And Mr. Ford was actually smiling. He scowled when he saw me and brushed Pog away with a hand that pretended to be brusque. Head bent low over the machine, he treadled furiously up another seam.

One night shortly after, when I was coming through the back yard in the dark, a rough cord cut across my check. I wondered what it could be, but did not stop to investigate then. The next morning I saw. It was a toy rubber mouse, suspended from the clothesline to within two or three inches of the ground. The next week a red rubber ball with a whistle in it blossomed on one of the other lines. And a week or two later a white rubber ball appeared. And always on the back porch was a clean saucer filled with milk.

Then a week passed without my seeing Pog once, and the saucer of milk disappeared from the porch step the following week, and the rubber things vanished from the clotheslines. Quite concerned, I was still loath to mention the cat to the querulous old man. But when I stopped in to pay my room rent I took my courage with me and asked him what had become of it.

"They poisoned him," he said bitterly, indicating the large house next door. Mr. Ford did not love his neighbors; in his opinion, none too private, they were responsible for most of the ills that beset the world in general and his little corner of it in particular.

Pog was dead. Mr. Ford went into a detailed recital of Pog's last days. He had been so meticulous about keeping the pillow Mr. Ford had given him clean. Mr. Ford looked out the window. "He was the cleanest cat I ever saw," he said, and there were tears in his voice. He stepped out onto the low back porch, and I followed him.

A deep noonday hush was on everything. The sun, still high in the heavens, had just passed the house, and it began to tip its pointed shadow, like some strange alter ego, across the yard. We both stood there quite still, not saying anything.

Suddenly a big black feline emerged from the shadowland beneath the porch where we were standing, advanced stealthily to the middle of the yard, and stopped still, turning back to cast questioning eyes at us. The shiny black coat glistened in the sun, and the yellow eyes searched us in the half-wise half-plaintive way Pog's eyes used to do.

Then Mr. Ford was scuttling down the steps in a fury. "Shoo! Shoo!! Shoo!!!" The cat made a black line across the yard. "Cats!" Mr. Ford fumed, returning to the porch with his head down. "I can't stand the things!"

Prophecy On Britain's Future

THE THING to remember about Charles A. Lindbergh's prediction of the course of the war is that Lindbergh speaks for the group of American airmen, in the Army and out, who bet their professional reputations on Germany even before the war started. Last summer, after the fall of France, when these men confidently prophesied total German victory in a few days or weeks, they actually convinced the military intelligence section of the War Department. Through the military intelligence, they even half convinced the President himself.

They were grossly in error then. As their professional pride is deeply involved, there is every reason to suspect they are equally in error now. Possibly they may be right, for in these grim times there is no such thing as certainty on the earth. But to any thinking man, the plans and expectations of the British high command, who are directing the fighting in this war, are both more interesting and more impressive.

BRIEFLY, the story the British have told the President and other American high officials is as follows: Although they know that a very terrible time is immediately ahead, they expect to get through the spring and summer battered but essentially intact. Then, after a winter of intensive preparation in Britain and intensive production of war materials in this country, they plan an offensive on the continent. Lindbergh flatly says this is impossible, but the British generals are quite as sure that with command of the sea, equality in the air, an army of 4,000,000 and superiority in morale and resources, they can begin rolling the Germans back from the coasts of Europe. Their only doubt is whether our intensive output of raw materials will begin in time.

Because of Col. Lindbergh's denunciation of the lend-lease bill, it is worth inquiring more closely into his credentials and the credentials of the group he represents.

ROUGHLY SPEAKING, they are men passionately interested in aviation, in whom Germany's early emphasis on the importance of air strength produced a natural professional deformation. Officers of the Air Corps, reading the reports of the German air program; American air manufacturers, visiting German air plants before the war; air technicians, hearing of German advances—all were inevitably inclined to assume that Germany could not help but win. In the Army they heard the same assumption from certain officers, who had been tickled in all their professionally sensitive spots by the total militarization of the German nation. Although many of these men were acquainted, they did not act together. They merely formed a powerful body of opinion of which Lindbergh was the prime spokesman.

Until the fall of France, theirs was a minority opinion. The French collapse was their professional triumph. For a time most other sects of military thought surrendered to them. Toward the end of July the military intelligence went so far as to submit to the President a memorandum positively forecasting that within 10 days to two weeks after the beginning of an all-out German attack the British air force would either be driven from the air or forced to seek refuge in Scottish bases.

FORTUNATELY for the world, this forecast did not materialize. When it failed to do so, successive explanations and new forecasts were firmly trotted out. Any one who followed American military opinion last summer will remember how the British were first expected to go under in a couple of weeks because they had lost their Channel airports, and then how it was said that pilot fatigue would finish them soon, and then how their industrial production was supposed to have been stopped dead. But each of these forecasts, in turn, also failed to materialize.

Although all the airmen are completely loyal Americans, and most of them are pro-British in private sympathy, the events of the summer produced in them more than a trace of professional irritation. Some of them took it almost as a personal insult that the British had not substantiated their prophecies. Hardly one of them admitted for an instant that the German strength might have been exaggerated or the British underestimated. And consequently serious friction began to develop between the Air Corps and the military intelligence, which was again refusing to take Air Corps dicta at face value. This friction has continued and grown worse until the present.

IN HIS TESTIMONY, Lindbergh clearly signified his wholehearted acceptance of the most extreme German claims. He put German air production at around 5,000 planes a month, although even our Air Corps does not guess it above 3,500, and the latest Army report is that it fell as low as 1,200 in November and December. He omitted Britain from his list of great air powers, while including this country and Japan, both obviously weaker than Britain in the air. He also omitted all mention of the increasing evidence of deficiencies and weaknesses in the German war effort.

Official reports show something very like a German transport breakdown. While crediting Germany with sufficient production of synthetic gasoline and fuel oil, they contain striking evidence of an extremely serious fuel oil shortage. They also indicate the possibility of an explosive shortage, and cast grave doubt on the morale of the German troops. But Lindbergh said nothing of these things.

Certainly it is in the realm of possibility that Britain will go under this summer. Certainly no one should be too optimistic about the plans presented to the President by the British high command. Yet in deciding how to act, the risks attendant on the alternative courses should be carefully weighed. It should be considered, for example, what kind of future United States is implied in Lindbergh's curiously cryptic remarks about air bases in Canada, driving the Germans out of South America and the economic organization of the hemisphere. If his words mean anything they mean a future of imperialism and autarchy. Possibly this is what the American people want.

President's Powers

By Ernest K. Lindley

He Can Make War

OPPOSITION to the lend-lease bill seems to be rooted chiefly in the fear that it will enable the President to take us into war.

By war I do not allude to any of the figures of speech which are befogging discussion of foreign policy. By war I mean armed conflict: fighting with deadly weapons.

We are not at war. We are a nonbelligerent friend of Great Britain and other nations which are resisting the Triple Axis.

There is nothing in the lend-lease bill which alters that status. If the President wants to go to war, he already has all the power he needs to do it. The lend-lease bill does not increase it. No act of Congress can take it away from him. The power is inseparable from the office.

Only Congress can formally declare war. But the President—any President—can precipitate war by exercise of his indisputable constitutional powers.

In the first place, the President is Commander in Chief of the armed forces, by explicit language of the Constitution. He is Commander in Chief in time of peace as well as in time of war.

In the second place, his powers in the field of foreign relations are enormous. In this field he has all the authority which the Presidency inherited from the British Crown, except as it is expressly limited by the Constitution. That is the established doctrine of the Supreme Court—the old Court, before it included a single Roosevelt appointee. The chief limitations set forth in the Constitution are that treaties must be ratified by two-thirds of the Senate and that only Congress can declare war.

HERE ARE some of the things which the President—any President—can do, and other Presidents have done:

He can send the Navy, or any part of it, anywhere in the world. Theodore Roosevelt sent it around the world. McKinley sent the battleship Maine to Havana Harbor when we were not at war with Spain. The President has the power to send a battleship, or the whole fleet, into the English Channel or the Mediterranean Sea tomorrow. Probably he could order the Navy to protect the sea lanes all the way from New York Harbor to Liverpool.

He can send, and has sent, troops into foreign countries without declaration of war by Congress. Other Presidents have sent American troops into Mexico, Nicaragua, China and other nations, where they engaged in armed conflict, without benefit of a declaration of war.

He can proclaim and pursue a policy which may lead to war, or must inevitably lead to war. The Monroe Doctrine was a Presidential policy, and it remained a Presidential policy until very recently it received Congressional sanction. The Monroe Doctrine is a commitment to fight under given conditions.

WILSON'S POLICY with regard to submarines became a cause for war in 1917. He could have adopted a different policy—as Bryan urged. The decision on policy was made by him, not by Congress. He created a situation which led to war.

He can break off diplomatic relations with any country without consulting Congress.

He can write provocative notes, make provocative speeches, or make demands, no matter how unreasonable, with the purpose of precipitating war.

He can make Executive agreements with foreign nations which may be far more important than treaties. The line between Executive agreements, which the President can make alone, and treaties, has never been clearly defined. The destroyer-base deal was an Executive agreement.

He can send abroad personal emissaries—such as Hopkins, Donovan, or a Col. House. He can reach secret understandings with foreign powers—which are as good as his word and his power to execute them.

THIS LIST could be extended. The powers of the President as Commander in Chief and as the official chiefly responsible for the conduct of our international relations are almost unlimited. They always have been. That is just as much a part of the American system of government as is the power of the House of Representatives to originate bills for raising revenue.

If President Roosevelt wants to go to war, he can do any number of things which will make armed hostilities unavoidable. There is nothing in the lend-lease bill which makes it easier for him to put us into war.

The lend-lease bill is concerned chiefly with the supplying of weapons to be used by nations whose survival we deem important to our national interest. We are already supplying them with weapons, and most of the critics of the lend-lease bill have declared that they favor this policy.

The main purpose of the bill is to make it possible for those nations to continue to obtain these weapons irrespective of their ability to pay for them in cash. The chief discretion which the bill gives to the President is to decide what, if anything, we shall take in payment.

The bill also makes it easier for him to merge the munitions orders for foreign nations with our own. This simplifies the whole rearmament effort and strengthens our diplomatic hand.

In the last analysis, there is very little, if anything, in this bill which the President cannot already do either by subterfuge or by an extreme interpretation of his inherent powers. The bill makes it easier to arm the nations we wish to arm and, by Congressional underwriting, confirms a policy which the Presidential candidates of both major parties advocated in the 1940 campaign.

If war were his aim, President Roosevelt would not be wasting time asking Congress for the lend-lease bill. If war were his aim, he could put us into war tomorrow—and no act of Congress could stop him.

A Review Of "The Good Old Days"*

FOR A LONG time I've wanted to get around to saying a few words about one of the most amusing pieces of American history—and one of the most illuminating—that I have read in many a long month. That is Mr. David Cohn's "The Good Old Days"—"A history," as the subtitle tells us, "of American morals and manners as seen through the Sears Roebuck catalogues 1905-1940."

The idea of chronicling the history of a civilization through what it buys is similar to an archeological expedition, which reconstructs a forgotten era by the instruments, utensils, clothing, cosmetics and housefurnishings that are found in tombs or buried cities. Mr. Cohn has discovered in the Sears Roebuck catalogues the Herculaneum of the Taft-to-Franklin Roosevelt era. And his book is a record of amazing change. Leaving ideologies aside, this history of Turkish rockers, gold ear-spoons with toothpick combined, mustache cups, hair rats, to tractors and streamlined washing machines is a little world's fair, "Half a century of progress."

IT IS ALSO a record of the emancipation of women. The front sections of the catalogue, which, in the good old days, were devoted to buggies, stoves and hardware, are now turned over to women's clothes. And the evolution of women's clothes shows that women's rights have not only included the vote and the university but the right to dress like human beings. We learn that the trailing skirt that once swept the streets began to be shortened by the habit of bicycle riding, which the Boston Woman's Rescue League described as immoral. From the hesitantly launched bicycle to the brazenly advertised ski of 1940 is a history of American freedom: Freedom of movement. It is also a history of American marriage—from the secluded harem to the free-swinging comrade who carries a rifle and leaps down hillsides with her mate.

BUT WOMAN'S DRESS also has its economic and social aspects. America has effortlessly moved from cotton to silk in woman's garments, from bulky woolens to sleek tweeds, from clumsy shoes to graceful pumps and oxfords, with the result that the United States is still the only country in the world where the farmer's daughter, who picks her clothes from a mail order catalog, and the Park Avenue lady, who buys on Fifth Avenue, are sisters over their skin. The democracy of American dress is unique. The United States is the only country still where people do not wear in their clothing the badge of class—the only one except for those where every one is in the same uniform.

The social striving behind the brown or black shirt includes the attempt to abolish class differences by uniformity of clothing. America has solved the question in its own way—through infinite diversity of design with mass production.

A READING of this book reveals also that while quality has gone up and taste has improved, prices have gone down. The American consumer of mass-produced articles gets more for his money than any other consumer in the world. This is an effective distribution of wealth and is the greatest achievement of American capitalism. From silk stockings to gas stoves it is without rival.

THE EVOLUTION of the farm from back-breaking labor to urban civilization is here breathtakingly recorded. From ice house and milk-cooling in wells to the gleaming electric refrigerator bought for a few dollars a month, from the zinc washtub and corrugated board to the machine that washes and wrings, is an emancipation proclamation without civil war—an emancipation that has lengthened the lives of farm women, who actually today live as long as their husbands or longer. It used to take about three farm wives for one husband's life-time, as the country cemeteries show.

AND THE CATALOGUE also reveals some encouraging things about commercial morality.

The one-price system, that everyone now has taken for granted, actually did not enter this country until the turn of the century. Before that the price at which you bought anything depended on your endurance and lung power. The universal rule, in high places and low, was "caveat emptor"—let the buyer beware! Now the rule has been almost universally transformed into "caveat venditor"—let the seller beware. Or, "The customer is always right."

The innovation of selling things by catalogue established the fixed price, with the guaranty that if the merchandise did not give satisfaction money would be returned. The only way a purchaser could be persuaded to send his money 2,000 miles on the strength of some words, or a picture, was through such a guaranty, and the only way the company could keep its business, under such a guaranty was by the quality of the merchandise. The success of this policy, in terms of profits, affected the whole merchandising field. A new field of activity grew up, in which the retailer set up laboratories to test the merchandise of the manufacturer, so that a mattress bought from one of the great retail houses represents experiments in bouncing hundredweights on competing springs.

At the turn of the century Sears Roebuck—like every one else—was selling tons of patent medicines, useless if not actually harmful. The robustness of the American people is proved by the fact that they survived the remedies offered them for everything from tuberculosis to "female disorders."

ONE ALSO DISCOVERS that cleanliness belongs almost exclusively to our generation. The bathroom today occupies a remarkably large part of the catalogue; the Saturday-night bath in the washtub was not a reality in American life until the middle years of this century. Today a catalogue still designed for farmers offers bathrooms, showers, chemical toilets, water softeners, bath salts, toilet waters, fancy soaps—and finds a market in terms of millions.

WE ALSO SEE the retreat of Frankie and Johnny, despite gangsterdom. In 1905 pistol toting was obviously an American custom and carrying a pistol as common to the Homo Americanus as the umbrella to the Englishman. The catalogues show pages of pistols, including those "especially made for ladies"—and anybody could buy them without a license. For ladies there was a purse-pistol coyly called "our baby."

IN A WORD, the "good old days" were not so good, and the bad new days seem fabulous from circa 1905.

It is interesting that new immigrants to this country are reading this book in Americanization classes. I recommend it to Americans, who will have fun recapturing their childhood, and, incidentally, will learn a lot, in a most amusing way, about American folkways.

Initiation Fees

SOME MONTHS AGO I remarked that the American people were so far gone in such vices as graft and deceit by public men, so comfortably adjusted to profiteering on public office by relatives of high officials, that, in words of one syllable, they just don't give a damn. Some of my fellow citizens were wounded sore by that observation, but not as much, I think, by the fact itself as by the open recognition of it.

You call a con-man a speculator or a cafe trollop a glamour girl and nobody's feelings are hurt, but they are what they are just the same, as well we know and they, too. And, similarly, if you just sort of goldplate our national popular immorality in civic affairs as an amiable frivolity people don't mind. On the contrary, they think it rather cute or mischievous, although we know it all amounts to a terrible burden of graft that comes out of the work and earnings of the citizens and a cynical condonation and encouragement of wrong.

THIS SALES TALK is by way of introducing a discussion of a condition that could not exist in any land whose people were not too sloppy in their morals to care. I refer to the extortion of millions of dollars from American citizens by labor unions, mostly unions of the A. F. of L., in return for permission to work on camps, arsenals and other works having to do with the national defense.

At the base we have the fact that workers are allowed to organize for collective bargaining, which is an honest enactment in that respect. But these A. F. of L. unions have been forcing men to join up at extortionate rates, and the American people and the Congress, which knows their mind, are so tired of studying out things, so discouraged in the matter of insisting on their rights and protesting, that nobody is doing anything about it. So a few private and, in some cases, very exclusive organizations are carting off tons of money which the people pay into the Treasury as taxes and the Treasury pays out to the workmen as wages.

THE SO-CALLED Hod-Carriers' Union is a spectacular example, although, of course, the carpenters and electricians and all are getting theirs, too.

The hod-carriers' is the common laborers' union. It has not held a national convention in 30 years, but it has been charging common pick-and-shovel workers $50 initiation fee plus dues. If we assume for a figure—and not an extravagant figure, by any means—that 50,000 such men have been put to work that would mean a rakeoff of $2,500,000 for that union alone, without reckoning in the dues at all.

Whose right of collective bargaining is this, anyway? Was it intended to protect the workmen or to provide a graft for a private organization? The workmen don't want to join. They don't rally 'round the union collector and implore him to be their bargaining agent. Personally, they would much prefer to part his hair with a spade and save that $50 per head plus dues, which would buy considerable shoemileage for their kids or gin for their innards come Saturday night.

But they have to give up to this stranger who shows up on work of the United States Government, and if the contractor puts them to work without the giveup this stranger will jerk his head at the strangers representing the carpenters' and electricians' union and they jerk the job, and the soldiers can sleep under the stars.

THIS COMMON laborers' union is one of our pretties. Over in Pennsylvania it bestrode the big high-speed highway job and took first cut at the pay of the poor, horny-handed sidehill dodgers of the farms and mines, many of them just getting off relief or public doin'-around jobs, who had muscle to sell and, by happy chance, a place to sell it.

But in Chicago it issued a sheaf of charters like a deck of cards to a dirty blackhander and gunman of the Colosimo-Capone civilization named Mike Carrozzo, who was such a low and notorious gorilla that even in Chicago he couldn't get naturalized until his third attempt, when obviously some crook must have put in the fix with some other crook.

The locals, be it remembered, get most of the graft, paying only a small divvy to the international, and the local may be one hoodlum, as in the case of Carrozzo, who was in himself about 30 locals, accountable to nobody, and one of the richest men in town in ready cash.

But what's the use? The Americans don't mind. It is the quaint, corrupt American way.

Creatures Of Chaos

By Barnet Nover

Germany And The Rumanian Riots

AFTER SEVERAL days of intense rioting and bloodshed, something approximating order has been restored in Rumania.

Horia Sima, vice premier and leader of the dissident Iron Guards, is reported to have given himself up to the authorities and may soon face a firing squad. The uprising which he headed was put down with a ferocity equal to that displayed by the rebels who had tried to overthrow the government. The Rumanian army is now believed to be in control of the situation.

Behind the army is the tearful "dictator," Gen. Ion Antonescu. But behind Antonescu is Hitler.

RUMANIA is not an independent nation, free to lead her own life, free to do as she pleases. She is a captive country, like Denmark or Norway or the Netherlands, a land where the ultimate authority is executed by an army of occupation.

Had Sima and his followers succeeded in getting rid of Antonescu and taking over the government they would have had no choice but to come to terms with the Nazis or face immediate overthrow. Nor, for all their fanatical nationalism, would they have balked at that. On the contrary, the Sima faction had for some time sought Nazi indorsement as the real pro-German party.

HORIA SIMA

As it happened, the uprising was put down and Antonescu was confirmed in his shaky dictatorship. Significantly, his first move after order had been restored was to issue a proclamation breathing fervent loyalty to the Axis and particularly to the "great Fuehrer." He knows which side his bread is buttered on.

THE QUESTION arises why the German garrison did not directly intervene to restore order in Rumania the moment the rioting began. A state of chaos such as obtained there last week would hardly seem to be to Germany's advantage.

The Reich needs Rumania as a larder, an indispensable source of oil, a base of operations for further action in the Balkans and last but not least, as a buffer against Russia. On all of these counts the maintenance of order in Rumania would seem to be a prime requisite for Hitler. Yet the Nazi garrison in Bucharest and elsewhere in the kingdom ostentatiously kept its hands off while Iron Guardists were slaughtering Iron Guardists, and property was being destroyed and the population terrorized.

The reason may very well be that in Hitler's eyes the long range advantages of the state of chaos which reigned in Rumania last week outweigh the temporary disadvantages entailed by such interference with normal life. The memory of the fearful events of the last few days may make many Rumanians not only willing but eager to accept German domination which they have only resented hitherto. As one correspondent put it: "Many persons who previously looked upon them (the Germans) as intruders openly expressed gratitude for their presence and expressed the opinion that German backing of General Antonescu had averted more bloodshed than occurred."

FROM THE very beginning the Iron Guard movement in Rumania has been if not the creation certainly the creature of the Nazis. The "martyred" Zelea Codreanu and his band of bloodthirsty romantics may have believed that they were the destined instruments of Rumania's salvation. Actually they were only clay in Hitler's hands. He used them, before the war began, to fight the pro-French, pro-Little Entente leanings of the government, supplying them with funds and with propaganda material and consequently feeding their hopes and ambitions, and they looked to the Fuehrer not only for inspiration but also for protection. Yet Hitler, Rumania's "protector," stood by while Rumania was forced to cede Bessarabia and northern Bukovina to Russia. And it was he who was responsible for the second partition of Rumania whereby that kingdom lost a valuable part of Transylvania.

STRANGELY enough this development did not cause the Iron Guards, or many of them at any rate, to oppose the Third Reich. They vented their wrath on the government which had been forced to submit to the loss of Transylvania and against Hungary which had been made the beneficiary of this partition. This element plus certain radical Iron Guard groups which favored a thoroughgoing economic and social revolution were the prime movers in last week's rebellion.

From the German point of view these groups had to be suppressed. If that were not done they might, at some future time when Germany were occupied elsewhere (in an all-out attack on England, for instance), dangerously embarrass the Reich by starting an uprising or launching an attack on Hungary. It is not at all unlikely, therefore, that while German agents were promising Sima aid if he and his followers rose against Antonescu, the latter was at the same time being given every assurance of support in dealing with rebellious elements of the Iron Guard. In other words, it was to Germany's advantage to have the struggle within the Iron Guard brought to a head during the present period of lull rather than risk having its flare up at a more dangerous time in the future. The struggle, for all its grim overtones for the Rumanian people, was one between puppets whose leading strings were being manipulated by the Nazis.

Mrs. Hughes' Breakfast Heads Gay Party List

By Elizabeth Henney

Forsaking the tea hour Washington society became breakfast and luncheon conscious yesterday as a wave of that brand of parties swept over the town.

Heading the list, and as a matter of fact the first party of the day, was the breakfast given by Mrs. James H. Hughes, wife of Senator Hughes, in honor of Miss Phyllis Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, of Fairfax, Va., and Miss Mary Theresa Norris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, of Washington. Both girls are debutantes of the current season and many of the guests were sister debs.

Mrs. Hughes, who entertained at their home at 2913 Glover Drive, served her guests a novel "cafeteria" breakfast, with scrambled eggs as the "piece de resistance" of the meal.

Among those who attended were Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Randolph Richardson, sister of one of the guests of honor; Miss Alice Ingersoll, Miss Marcia O'Brien, Miss Mary Betts, Miss Jane Wyatt and her sister, Miss Laura Belle Wyatt; Miss Achsah Bowie Dorsey, and Miss Mary Eugenia Coleman whose engagement to Ensign L. H. Roddis, U. S. N., was recently announced. The young men in the party included Oakley Andrews, Hugh Willis, Robert Arledge, Howard R. Morton, Hugh Kabler, Penny O'Brien, John O. Stevens, Claude Hydrick, W. M. Kabber, G. B. Siebold, Anthony Henning and Brison Norris.

McNutts Entertain At the Shoreham

Luncheons proved to be a popular form of party with many a Washington host and hostess and Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt chose yesterday to entertain at a cozy luncheon at their apartment in the Shoreham Hotel.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. McNutt were Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, and Col. Kemper Williams.

Mrs. Worthington Gives Merry Party

At the same time of day a hilariously happy group of guests sat down to luncheon with Mrs. Ralph Worthington at the latter's home in Virginia. Mrs. Worthington, who divides her time between her Virginia home and her apartment at the Shoreham, had decided on a "sit-down" luncheon, carefully made out a list and then left it at her apartment in town. As a result there were no place cards and no protocol, so the guests sat where they pleased and a merry time was had by all.

Included among Mrs. Worthington's guests were the Minister of South America and Mrs. Ralph William Close, Sir Richard and Lady Tute, former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. William E. Borah, former Minister of Austria and Mme. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Fred Roy, Mrs. Henry D. Flood, Miss Evelyn Gordon, Wilbur Hubbard, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, George Abell, Edward Van Deventer, George Williams and a number of others.

Vandenbergs Honor Magazine Editor

Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg chose the luncheon form of party yesterday and entertained a small group in honor of Miss Margaret Case, editor of Vogue magazine. Miss Case, who has been in town since Friday as the house guest of Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, left last night to return to her home in New York. There were ten guests at the Vandenberg party.

Also having guests for luncheon yesterday were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, who gathered in a few friends at their estate, Montpelier Manor, at Laurel, Md., in accordance with their Sunday custom whenever they are in residence there.

Dr. Cajigas' Party Honors Henry F. Gradys

Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas entertained at a buffet supper last night in honor of the recently retired Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady and the retiring commercial consular of the Chilean Embassy, Senor Carlos Campbell, and his wife, Senora de Campbell.

Among the other guests who were present at the farewell festivity were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Najera, the Ecuadorean Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro, the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante and their daughter, Senorita Maria Teresa Escalante; the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Mitchells and their daughter, Senorita Christina de Mitchells; the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Torbey, the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos and the Bolivian Minister and Senora de Guachalla.

Other guests outside of Latin-American diplomatic circles were Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller and their daughter, Mrs. Edwin Abbott, who is visiting them from Atlanta, Ga.; Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer, who sang for the group, and Dr. Vladimar Rybar, who accompanied her on the piano; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Miss Anna Bell Ward and her sister, Miss Adeline Ward, who came from Lexington, Ky., for the party; Mrs. Helen Moodie, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator and Mrs. William King and Dr. and Mrs. Pedro de Alba.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Col. and Mrs. Consuelo Seanone, Representative and Mrs. Dow Harter, Miss Patricia Grady and Reginald Grady.

Bohns Honor Kerenskys At Reception

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn entertained last night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Kerensky at a reception after the Town Hall lecture at which Mr. Kerensky spoke.

The party which was to have been fairly small grew to large proportions as the many friends of the Bohns began to stream in following the lecture program. Receiving in a living room which echoed the flower scheme of the dining room—white lilies — Mrs. Bohn, she is the former Miss Grace Roper, welcomed her guests in a floor-length black crepe dress, set off with a black shawl splashed with crimson roses. Mrs. Kerensky accented her striking beauty with a long-sleeved black dress, cut with a square neckline, and a smart up hair-do.

Among the guests who were there was Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller who had interviewed Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert and Mrs. Lionel Atwill over a local station following Mr. Kerensky's address.

Others there were Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Roper, the parents of the hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, she in a stunning black dress cut on simple lines, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Sir Owen and Lady Chalkley, Homer S. Cummings, Madame Lombard, and Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Dye.

Still others present were Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller and their daughter, Mrs. Edwin Abbott, Dr. and Mrs. John W. Studebaker, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Freeman, Admiral and Mrs. Charles E. Riggs and Miss Catherine Riggs, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd Daft, Mrs. Harvey Airley, Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Von Hahn, and Dr. Theodore Schmidt.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

WASHINGTON HAS BEEN FULL of attractive out-of-town visitors this past week-end, many of whom managed to combine a look-in at the hearings before the Foreign Affairs Committee on Capitol Hill with plenty of social activity.

Staying with the Jasper Du Boses at their home in Georgetown was charming Mrs. Grace Hendricks Eustis who, when she lived in Washington several years ago, was so interested in politics that she got a job reporting for a local paper. Since those days her friends here have seen her far too rarely though she usually comes at least once a year for a visit and often hunts out Warrenton way. Mrs. Eustis was entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth over the weekend.

Beautiful Mrs. Shaw Parker is the house-guest of Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth and, to the delight of friends, is very busy seeing to the work on the house which she is doing over in Georgetown. One hopes that she will soon be settling down here for the winter.

THE RICHARD WIGGLESWORTHS, who have just taken possession of the house in Georgetown recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Peter 3rd, were hosts of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston, over the weekend. The Coolidges are always welcomed back to the Capital by numerous friends who knew them when Mr. Coolidge was Undersecretary of the Treasury a few years ago.

Weekend guests of Countess Zoppola—she has taken the Christopher Bramwell's house on N Street—were Mr. and Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, for whom their hostess gave a cocktail party on Saturday. Just next door, Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker were hosts to Mr. and Mrs. Huger McAdoo, for whom they gave a Sunday luncheon party.

Another cheery luncheon on a gloomy Sunday was that given by the Countess of Gainsborough at the Wardman Park Hotel. Other weekend parties were Mrs. Waggaman Pulver's cocktail party on Saturday afternoon and the Cortland Parkers' dinner Saturday night.

Telephoning to Mrs. Arthur Krock these days one is apt to be told that she has "gone to the country for the day," and this on days when the weather would seem very unsuitable to pastoral meanderings. The fact is that Martha is heart and soul in the job of doing-over the old house on the farm which the Krocks recently bought in Virginia near Berryville. She says that things are now at the stage where anyone with common sense would feel perfectly hopeless but that her idea of bliss is to sit on a pile of lumber and eat a picnic lunch while discussing plans with the contractor.

Even more recent farm owners are Prince and Princess Aleksander Hohenlohe, who have just purchased a place in Maryland near Elkton. The Hohenlohes intend to be real farmers and have acquired cows and farm equipment along with the property, but I hear that there are also plans for a tennis court and a swimming pool.

Robert Pell of the State Department is accompanied on his present trip to the Dominican Republic by his father, Stephen Pell, of New York. The younger Pell has gone to attend the conferences marking the first anniversary of the founding of the Dominican refugee colony. The land for the colony was donated by Gen. Trujillo, who has been spending some months in New York and who will not be able to attend the conferences because of ill health. Mr. Pell and his father intend to fly back to the United States at the close of the conferences.

Betty McNally Engaged to Wed

The engagement has been announced of Miss Betty McNally, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William J. McNally, of Chevy Chase, Md., to Edward K. Walsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Walsh, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Miss McNally attended Georgetown Visitation Convent, was graduated from Holton Arms, and spent a year in Paris at Mlle. De San Carlos'.

Mr. Walsh was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1929 where he was a member of Psi Upsilon Fraternity and Dragon Senior Society.

After their marriage in the spring, they will make their home in Baltimore, Md., where Mr. Walsh is associated with the American Can Co.

Roosevelts Entertain Stars

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained last night at a buffet supper at the White House for the members of the cast of "Old Acquaintance," who came from New York to put in a command performance of their widely acclaimed play.

Jane Cowl, other members of the cast and the District Commissioners were honored guests at the affair.

Before the command performance the cast entertained at a cocktail party at the Hay-Adams House for members of the press. Miss Cowl received in a black street dress set off with a silver fox fur scarf and a matching fur hat. Miss Peggy Wood, feature player in the successful stage show, accented her blond beauty with a black velvet hat and black moire dress set off with a striking silver pin. Mrs. Dwight Deere Wyman, wife of the producer, attended with her three daughters, one of whom is appearing in the revival of "Charlie's Aunt" in New York.

Miss Aurioel Lee, director of serving table in a black dress trimmed in tiers of gold braid. Many other notables of the stage were present at the event which preceded the grand opening of the President's Birthday Ball Week.

Y.W.C.A. Annual Dinner to Announce New Officers

Members and friends will be present at the thirty-sixth annual meeting and dinner of the Young Women's Christian Association tonight at 6:30, at which announcement will be made of new members elected to the board of directors.

Miss Elsa M. Peterson, president of the present board of directors, will preside. The Elizabeth Somers Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Mary Burnett, will present the Service of Worship, assisted by Mrs. Edwin B. Parker and Miss Edith L. Dawson.

Reports will be given by Miss Peterson; Miss Margaret R. Fox, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth M. Haney, general secretary, and Mrs. Albert Atwood, chairman of the nominating committee.

The subject for the panel discussion is "What Washington Wants and Expects of the Y. W. C. A." Taking part in the discussion will be Miss Ella Gardner, resource on recreation in the Department of Agriculture; Dr. Eugenie A. Leonard, field of guidance, Catholic University; Mrs. M. K. Manookian, the Rev. D. Peter Marshall; Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Community Social Agencies; Representative William T. Pheiffer, of New York; Dr. George C. Ruhland, health commissioner; Dr. Faith Williams, housing and nutrition; A. Z. Wood, president, Junior Board, Chamber of Commerce; Gerald Brown, a taxi driver.

Miss Bertha Pabst, chairman of the tellers, will make the report of the counting of the ballots. There are to be twelve members elected tonight to serve a period of three years.

Mrs. Enochs to Speak

Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs, special assistant in the Pan American division, Children's Bureau, will speak at the luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club today at 12:30 p. m. Her subject will be "The Good Neighbor Policy in Its Relations to the Welfare of Women and Children."

Eric Underwood To Address Virginia Historical Group

Eric Underwood, the well-known English writer on art and historical subjects, will address the Society for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, of which he has been elected an honorary member, at its meeting at the Willard Hotel on January 31 at 3 p. m. The title of the lecture is "I Know Sir Walter Raleigh."

Underwood has traveled some 70,000 miles in 40 States of this country during the past three years, and will include remarks on what has especially appealed to him in America.

As a director of the National Trust for the Preservation of Historic Places, a British association with which the late Lord Lothian also was connected and to which he bequeathed his magnificent home, "Blickling Hall," Underwood also will give some details about historic buildings in England which have been destroyed or damaged in the war.

Mrs. Everard Robinson Todd, directress, will preside at the meeting.

B'nai B'rith Tea Today

With Mrs. Joseph Bernstein as chairman, the Women's Auxiliary, B'nai B'rith, is sponsoring a member-bring-a-member tea at the home of Mrs. Jack Rosenberg, 1325 Holly Street Northwest, this afternoon. This tea is one in the drive for an increased membership and a prelude to the gift luncheon to be held at the end of February, the proceeds of which will go to the many philanthropies being aided by the B'nai B'rith.

Several Tea Parties Given

Several teas held the spotlight yesterday afternoon in Washington, among them the afternoon tea and reception given by the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard for the members of the department.

Assisting Mrs. Wickard at the tea table were Mrs. Hugh Bennett, Mrs. W. A. Jump, Mrs. M. L. Wilson, Mrs. R. M. Evans, Mrs. E. C. Auchter, Mrs. O. E. Reed, Mrs. John R. Mohler, Mrs. H. R. Trolley, Mrs. Leslie A. Wheeler and Mrs. Roy F. Hendrickson.

Also entertaining during the afternoon were Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Archer Lynn Learch and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Oscar Ridley Rand, whose party took place at the Officers' Club, Army War College. Assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Edwin C. McNeil, Mrs. W. A. Wood, Mrs. J. F. Watson, Miss Janet Lerch and Miss Virginia Fardwell, of Baltimore.

Other parties during the afternoon included the tea given by Maj. and Mrs. Parker West in honor of Senator and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster; and Mrs. Norment Bissett's party given at her own home.

Prince Olav, Princess Martha Visit New York

Their Royal Highnesses Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway arrived at the Waldorf-Astoria Towers from their home in Bethesda, Md., and are accompanied by Col. Nikolai Ramm Ostgaard, aide de camp to His Royal Highness and Countess Ragni Ostgaard, lady in waiting to the Crown Princess.

Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, Norwegian minister to the United States, and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne also are at the Towers for the duration of the royal visit.

E. C. Tefft Weds Mrs. G. V. Harris

Rockville, Md., was the scene of the marriage on Friday of Mrs. Gertrude V. Harris, of Philadelphia, and Edward Creel Tefft, of Washington. Dr. Herbert O. Cooper, pastor of the Rockville Baptist Church, officiated at the ceremony. The bride was attended by Mrs. J. Forbes Campbell, while Francis Cabell Brown acted as best man.

Following a reception at the Lafayette Hotel, the couple left for New York, whence they will embark for a short stay in Havana. After February 1 the couple will be at home at the Kennedy Warren.

Mrs. Harris has long been prominent in Philadelphia and Atlantic City society. Mr. Tefft, formerly executive vice president of the Union Planters National Bank, Memphis, Tenn., has for the past five years supervised liquidation activities of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Chevy Chase Club Unit To Fete New Members

These members are Mrs. John A. Logan, Mrs. M. Rea Shafer, Mrs. J. E. Loggins and Mrs. L. Edwin Yocum.

Mrs. J. P. Ault will be tea hostess and Mrs. J. Horace Smithey in charge of the program. The artists, well known in local music circles, will be Neva Maaske and Ellena Crivella.

WARNING to Mothers of Growing Children

WHEN COLDS STRIKE . . . Relieve Misery the Improved, Home-Tested Vicks Way . . . Perfected for Children

No matter what you have tried in the past to relieve misery of colds—treat your child the improved Vicks way—with a "VapoRub Massage". Then notice how swiftly it starts to quiet coughing, ease muscular soreness or tightness and bring comfort.

With this MORE THOROUGH treatment (developed by Vicks staff of Doctors) the poultice-and-vapor action of Vicks VapoRub more effectively . . .

PENETRATES irritated air passages with soothing medicinal vapors, inhaled deeply with every breath.

STIMULATES chest and back like a warming poultice or plaster.

To get a "VapoRub Massage" with all its benefits, here's what you do: Massage VapoRub for 3 minutes on IMPORTANT RIB-AREA OF BACK as well as chest and throat—spread a thick layer of VapoRub on chest and cover with a warmed cloth. BE SURE to use genuine Vicks VapoRub.

When you see the results of this improved Vicks treatment you will wonder how any sensible, thrifty mother could possibly deny her child the comfort and relief it brings from misery of colds.

Cover-up Styles Vie With Bare OnesforEvening

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

With the President's Birthday Ball almost here, the problem of what to wear may still be a questoin mark in the minds of those who are going to attend. Since spring approaches, it is wise to choose a dress that can be worn right through the season and into summer.

Vieing for top honors on the formal and informal end of the fashion ladder are the bare and "cover-up" evening dresses. Both of these fashions—even the cover-up variety—will be wearable through summer evenings.

The off-shoulder and halter neck styles, ever popular for strictly formal wear, have leaped forward a pace as favorites. Carrying out the soft supple outline, full, billowy, gathered and draped skirts appear with bare shoulder formals.

Diaphanous materials also appear in the long-sleeved dinner dresses. On the whole, this type of sophisticated formality has a slight edge on the strictly bare-shouldered gown, even for formal wear. It is seen in jersey and silk shantung with shirtwaist and sweater-like top.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Alone at Last

(A Post-Inaugural Chant)

How wonderful:

Not to be getting people up for company breakfast; not to be hustling the family out of the way so there will be no collisions in the bathroom; not to have to serve as a lookout so that ladies in tin curlers will not encounter gentlemen in shorts; not to have to tip-toe to the doors of guest rooms to try to discover how far along the inmates are in their dressing, and if it's time to fix the eggs; not to be hunting up electric irons and spot removers and trying to inveigle the maid into helping out with a little hand laundry; not to be saying cheerily over the oatmeal, "Now just what would you like to see today?"

How wonderful:

Not to have the closets full of other people's overcoats, hats and shoes; not to be stealthily entering guests' bedrooms to recover misplaced combs, face creams, galoshes, etc.; not to be searching constantly over the house for things that have been "put in their places" and that nobody can now find; not to be going stiffly around all day in dressed-up clothes and manners; not to be dashing repeatedly to the mirror to repowder a shining nose and smooth a recalcitrant permanent; not to be continually picking up newspapers from the floor, emptying ash trays, removing junk from the mantel, pulling the shades even; not to be wondering if the lost clothes brush could have been carried to the basement with the basketload of white elephants.

How Wonderful:

Not to have to be a watchdog of conversation; not to be eternally introducing bright, interesting—and safe—subjects of talk; not to be keeping the interventionists and the isolationists off of Lindbergh, the Republicans and the Decocrats off Roosevelt; not to let any member of the family inadvertently mention Cousin Edythe's divorced husband or the name of the family whose daughter Uncle George ran away with; not to have to prevent any slurs on the Baptists before Aunt Maude, any quips about the Methodists before Aunt Beulah; not to have to sit tensely on the edge of the chair to keep any family feuds from flaring and to see that nobody is shocked, hurt, affronted, bored or booed.

How Wonderful:

Not to be constantly thinking in terms of food—whether to have a stuffed steak or a rib roast for dinner and whether all the visitors will be home for luncheon or eat downtown; not to be trying to remember whether Cousin Grace is allergic to lima or string beans and whether Aunt Lutie takes her cup of hot water before or after meals; not to be sitting at the table nervously calculating whether the ice box rolls will permit three or four helpings all around; not to be trying to discuss intelligently the Balkan campaign with Cousin Horace and mentally trying to figure out what must be ordered at the grocery if they all stay over Sunday.

How Wonderful:

Just to sit in a house of heavenly peace in a familiar chair that seems like an old friend met after a long absence; to tune in on the radio and catch up again with the vicissitudes of Barbara Bloke and Larry Leech, who have been off the air while guests followed the antics of Joan Jitters and Donald Dumm; to see the pile of papers on the library table, the white ravelings on the floor and do nothing about them; to know there is no dessert for the next meal and not to care; to hear the younger members of the family uttering iconoclastic statements and not to get nervous; to see the master of the house zestfully playing his usual role of bull in the china shop and not to worry; to feel the comfort of a familiar dress; to be in the presence of those who look with eyes that are no longer, curious, appraising or even aware; to feel the blessed relief of having a dark cloth thrown over your goldfish bowl.

Keep Those Endearing New Charms

By Ida Jean Kain

SO you've slimmed two inches off the waist and three off the hips! And you feel so slim and young again that your mind is made up never, never to let your figure get sloppy again! Good for you.

Just a small amount of regular exercise will keep the muscles elastic and your figure trim. And, more than that will keep you feeling fit and alive!

You won't need to do all the exercises it took to whittle off the inches—just the ones which meet your particular needs. A daily half-dozen should suffice.

For That Willow Waist

POSITION: Stand on one knee with other leg stretched straight out at side, arms stretched overhead, and hands grasping a wand near each end.

MOVEMENT: Stretch up, then bend to alternate sides, touching end of wand to the floor. Repeat with position of legs reversed. This is a difficult stretcher but marvelously streamlining. Begin easily, repeating only six times and gradually work up to twelve.

For a Streamlined Midriff

POSITION: Lying on back on the floor, knees bent and feet on floor, arms upstretched on floor overhead.

MOVEMENT: Slowly come up to sitting position, arms outstretched and touch hands to knees. Then slowly lower backward to starting position. Repeat five times, gradually increasing to ten.

Now the Hips!

POSITION: Lying on left side on the floor, right hand on floor in front for support, legs stretched down.

MOVEMENT: Shuttle legs back and forth in a wide, scissorslike action, keeping both legs well off the floor for freedom of motion. When you get into shape, you can do this exercise as many as 100 times. Change sides between each 25 counts. From the same position on the side, make wide circles with the legs, swinging from the hips. That takes in both hips and thighs! Change sides between each twelve counts in leg circling and gradually work up to 100.

At the finish, shake legs vigorously from hips to rid these muscles of tension. Then take a good, thoroughgoing stretch, followed by relaxing, to loosen up all your muscles and leave you feeling rested.

Onion Dishes for Those Who Like Them

EVERYONE does not look upon onions with reverence as did the Egyptians who once worshiped them and used an onion ring as their symbol of everlasting life. But there are those who like their onions—and eat them.

If the cook is looking for onion dishes to vary the menu, the two following recipes make most flavorsome dishes. The recipes follow:

Onions in Cheese Sauce

Cook 12 medium-sized onions in boiling water until tender. Drain. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a double boiler, add 3 tablespoons flour and mix well. Add 1½ cups milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add ½ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper and 1 cup grated American cheese and stir until the cheese is melted. Pour over the onions and if desired sprinkle with paprika. Serves six.

Glistening stuffed onions on a favorite chop plate will intrigue your family and guests, too. Try making them this way:

Baked Stuffed Onions

Remove skins from 6 large onions and boil in salted water, uncovered for 10 minutes. Drain and turn upside down to cool. Remove centers of onions, leaving a shell sufficiently thick to retain shape. Chop onion which has been removed from center and combine with ¾ cup soft bread crumbs, ¾ cup chopped cooked chicken, ¼ cup thin white sauce, 1 egg yolk and salt and pepper. Stuff onion shells with mixture, sprinkle with buttered cracker crumbs and bake in a combine with ¾ cup thin white onions are tender, about 40 minutes. Serves six.

Her Husband Is Buried in Work, Morning, Noon And Night, Seven Days a Week; Wife Asks How To Overcome Her Jealousy of His Occupation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please tell me how to grow up, emotionally, so that I will not be jealous of my husband's work. He is buried in work morning, noon and night, seven days a week. There is never a minute when the two of us can enter into a little world of our own and enjoy the sort of companionship I have presumed a husband and wife could rightly expect of each other.

I am in sympathy with my husband's professional aims and am doing quite a few things to help him advance, but I am utterly sick of a steady diet of it,—served up over a period of years. We have several children and I have numerous hobbies and outside interests, but so far I have found no way to sublimate my intense longing for masculine companionship.

I actually hunger for my husband's society,—such as going to a movie with him, occasionally, or just spending quiet evenings with him at home. Even more do I yearn for a share in the spotlight of his interest and attention. After all, it boils down to a very selfish attitude,—which, of course, makes it all the more irritating. I would neither feel nor voice any objection to his interest in his work if he confined it to the usual working hours, or if the weekends brought respite. But such is not the case.

How can I change myself so that the more engrossed he is in work the happier I am; the more ambitious he grows, the prouder I get; and the less I see of him, the better I like it? A drastic change would be necessary, as such reactions are foreign to my nature. I shall be grateful for your help.

INADEQUATE WIFE.

Man's Conduct Implies Marital Incompatibility

DEAR I. W.: "Where there's a will, there's a way"—so the proverb tells us; and if your husband really enjoyed your society; if he found stimulus, solace and real companionship therein, he would devise ways and means of giving you that "greater share in the spotlight of his interest and attention" which you desire. It may be that you allow him no peace from henpecking demands or querulous complaints or a running fire of trivial gossip or even of cloying, saccharine overtures to lovemaking, when he is at hand.

Perhaps you brought to marriage the "clinging vine" approach;" the childish assumption that it was to be your husband's responsibility, as well as his perennial delight, to have you always on his mind, around his neck or in his arms. Perhaps you have never desired for yourself, nor conceded him, an area of privacy in thought and feeling and action in the marriage,—so that he long ago sought refuge in constant work as the impeccably legitimate, moral "sanctuary" from your ubiquitous wifeliness. Perhaps you have actually killed, —by suffocation,—his initial interest in and affection for you.

In any event—and whatever the detailed facts of your situation—one is obliged to conclude that your husband is systematically (if perhaps unawarely) avoiding you; that his total immersion in his work is a form of "compensation" for lack of satisfaction in his marriage, and a means of "respectable" escape from your society.

It would be adding insult to injury, it seems to me,—rather than constructively dealing with your problem,—for you to try to develop a negative attitude toward your husband, for the supposed purpose of rendering his negative attitude toward you the more tolerable. It would be far better, in my opinion, for you to take stock of yourself and study your man, with the idea of creating a domestic set-up and brand of conjugal cooperation that would irresistibly win him from his professional preoccupations.

Since you have told us nothing about the man himself, nor about his "professional aims," nor what you (so you say) are "doing to help him advance"—but have confined your remarks, with canny restraint, to a generalized recital subconsciously intended to incite warmly defensive sympathy for your plight—it is impossible to draft specific suggestions for making yourself more attractive to him.

As for "how to grow up, emotionally, so that you will not be jealous of your husband's work," —that is a very large order; a program for a lifetime. Mrs. Roosevelt,—as she tells in her autobiography, "This Is My Story," and as Ruby Black retells in part in her biography of the First Lady's life (titled "Eleanor Roosevelt"),—faced and solved such a problem, writing magnificent new chapters into the history of womankind's accomplishments, as a result. One feels that Anne Morrow Lindbergh has translated a similar challenge into a comparable triumph over seemingly insuperable obstacles.

The fact that you have been married long enough to have borne "several children," and are just awakening to the need of "growing up, emotionally," prompts one to wonder whether there is much hope for you—particularly since your idea of solving your problem is to turn your spirit's face away from your husband; rather than to embark on a program which will put you in stride with him, physically and socially (in the larger meaning of the latter term). Perhaps the most apt recommendation I can make is that you read Florence Guy Seabury's "Love Is a Challenge," and Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's "How to Be Happy Though Human." Both of these books point the way to emotional coming-of-age.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Much Cotton Used In Making String

String-savers all over the country will be interested to know that they are involved in a very important branch of the American cotton industry. For instance, to make the string they like to save, and that other people put to such good use, takes all the cotton grown on 400,000 Southern acres, according to reports received by the Cotton Textile Institute. This amounts to about 200,000 of the 8,000,000 bales of cotton used in the United States annually.

This means that 190,000,000 pounds of cotton are converted into the finest types of light and heavy twine, clotheslines, fishnets and lines, sash cords, tire cord and other types where flexibility, quality or appearance are of importance.

Thousands Due Here to Oppose Aid to Britain

A "ground swell" of "thousands" of presons descending on Washington within the next few weeks to protest further aid to Britain was planned by the American Peace Mobilization at a conference here yesterday.

Plans of the A. P. M.'s organizing committee, drafted by its chairman, Dr. Walter Neff, professor of psychology at the College of the City of New York, were indorced by 220 delegates attending a two-day session at the Burlington Hotel.

On February 1 approximately 1,000 persons from the East's major industrial cities will come here to petition Congress not to pass the lend-lease bill, the plans state. The Town Meeting of Youth, claiming to represent all of the country's youth organizations, will voice the same sentiments in its conference here February 7 through February 9, A. P. M. officers said.

A large delegation from the Middle West will arrive here February 13 to add to protest against passage of the bill.

The organization proposes to make Washington's Birthday a day of protest throughout the country, with "great public demonstrations, meetings and parades."

Culmination of the organization's peace campaign will be on March 1, when "thousands of men and women shall roll into Washington from the eastern half of the United States," according to the plans.

In plans called "community activity," the organization proposes:

Public demonstrations and picket lines before the homes of Congressmen and other public officials; "peace vigils;" public demonstrations and parades on all holidays; petitions; postcard, wire and telephone campaigns; motorcades; peace assemblies in schools.

In addition to the 220 registered degeates attending the conference, which closed last night, there were 50 "observers." A total of 27 States was represented, 51 women's organizantions, and 21 youth organizations, according to officers. They said labor organizations sent 77 delegates—the C. I. O., 37, and the A. F. L., 13, with the rest listed as "independents."

BulbFirmsFace Trust Charges

Attorney General Jackson announced last night that suits charging 12 corporations with monopolizing the electric light bulb industry would be entered in Federal court at Trenton, N. J., today.

He said the Government would seek cancellation of patent licensing agreements under which the Justice Department's antitrust division contends the corporations have "unlawfully restrained competition."

The complaint, to be filed by William S. Smith, United States attorney at Trenton, will charge, the department said, that the corporations entered into a combination to fix prices, restrict production artificially, and control the business of independent bulb manufacturers.

The department asserted that investigations by the antitrust division showed that the General Electric Co. and the Corning Glass Works "have monopolized the manufacture and sale of glass bulbs and have secured monopolistic control over frosted glass bulbs."

It added that General Electric and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., through patent licensing agreements, "control 90 per cent of all such (incandescent) lamps made and sold in the United States;" have been "able to fix the resale price of all lamps," and "have been able to control and to suppress the competition of independent manufacturers."

The department also charged that General Electric and its affiliate, International General Electric, "have agreed with foreign manufacturers to divide the world market."

"As a consequence," the department statement continued, "foreign manufacturers have agreed not to sell their products in the United States and thus the growth of independent manufacturers in this country to compete with General Electric has been stifled."

The companies named as defendants were: General Electric Co., International General Electric Co., Inc., and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., all of New York; Corning Glass Works, and American Blank Co., Corning, N. Y.; Empire Machine Co., Portland, Me.; N. V. Philips' Gloeilampenfabrieken, Curacao, West Indies, and New York; Consolidated Electric Lamp Co., Danvers, Mass.; Hygrade Sylvania Corporation, Salem, Mass.; Ken-Rad Tube and Lamp Corporation, Owensboro, Ky.; Chicago Miniature Lamp Works, Chicago, and Tung-Sol Lamp Works, Inc., Newark, N. J.

U. S. Propaganda Mail to Axis To Test Law

New York, Jan. 26 (INS).—To test international postal agreements whereby the Axis powers have been sending propaganda through the United States mails, the Council for Democracy today launched a "counteroffensive." Democratic "propaganda" will be mailed to hundreds of prominent persons in Germany, Italy and Russia.

A glowing description of "How Democracy Works in the United States" will be translated into German, Italian and Russian and mailed under the international postal agreements to mayors of cities and other officials, newspaper editors, businessmen and others in the totalitarian states, C. D. Jackson, president of the Council for Democracy, announced.

Under the postal agreements, the foreign governments would be bound to permit their postal services to distribute the letters. If they do not do so, it was indicated by the Council for Democracy, attempts will be made to deprive them of the privilege of distributing propaganda by mail in this country.

"Since our Government has rigidly adhered to its word in this matter," Jackson said tonight, "we have the right to expect reciprocal treatment. For this reason, we have prepared a letter which simply states plain truths about democracy . . . We state the facts and those who receive them—if any do—will be able to make their own comparisons."

WARNING to Income Tax Payers

Radical CHANGES in this year's tax laws mean that:

Many Individuals must pay from 22½% to 57½% MORE Income Tax than they paid last year.

EVERY single person making over $16 per week, EVERY married person making over $39 per week—regardless of exemptions or deductions—MUST FILE A RETURN.

Over a quarter million taxpayers have used this book in previous years to keep their taxes down. Thousands this year will now welcome and use the NEW 1941 EDITION of

IF YOU ARE SINGLE and Earn $16 a week or more

MARRIED and Earn $39 a week or more

YOU are NOW, for the first time, subject to the Income Tax and MUST file a Return!

YOUR INCOME TAX

HOW TO KEEP IT DOWN

1. By knowing EACH and EVERY deduction to which you are justly entitled—many of which your tax blank *does not tell you about.

2. By learning how to prepare your income tax return QUICKLY AND CORRECTLY... thus avoiding future assessments, penalties and interest charges.

THIS is a crucial year for income taxpayers. Rates are immensely higher. Exemptions are lower. It is up to the taxpayer to find out his legal deductions—because the tax blanks do not even provide space for some of them.

Right now is the time to find out definitely how to make out your correct return, and how to avoid either underpaying or overpaying your tax.

Each year, thousands of income taxpayers unknowingly pay the Government more than they should. In a great many of these cases the Government has no indication that it is receiving more than its due. As a result, the money is not refunded. Each year, other thousands of taxpayers are heavily penalized for underpayment caused by their honestly mistaken ideas about exemptions and deductions.

At this critical period in the country's welfare, each of us wants to share his rightful part of national defense. However, the government expects no one to overpay his tax, and an incorrect return, whether resulting in either underpayment or overpayment, is a definite hindrance to the taxation program, involving needless and expensive readjustments.

SAVING is more vital than ever before

"Your Income Tax," by J. K. Lasser, C.P.A., is this year's addition to the widely used series of guide books which in previous years have sold over 250,000 copies. It is new, completely up-to-date, covers every Federal income tax requirement and every important change of the past year. It is written in simple, untechnical language. It is specifically organized, page by page, to give you the quickest and most accurate help ever devised for income taxpayers.

GUARANTEED to save you time and taxes— or your money back

From their experience with over a quarter million taxpayers in previous years, the publishers of this book are so certain that it will save a great deal of your time, enable you to keep your tax down, and avoid the trouble of later assessments, that they offer it to you on this Double-Guarantee: (1) When you receive "Your Income Tax" look it through. Examine the sections that apply to you. If you do not agree that they will be of definite help—return it then, and the publishers will refund its full price to you. OR (2). After using the book in making out your actual tax return, if you then do not agree that it has saved you time and money you may return it for a full refund at any time up to and including March 20, 1941.

NOTE TO "FIRST-TIME" TAXPAYERS:

For those who this year must file an income tax return for the first time, this book contains a special step-by-step guide to each and every line on your tax blank. It will save you time, clear up doubts, and avoid expensive errors and legal penalties.

THIS BOOK TELLS YOU:

- 59 Steps to Be Taken Before the End of the Year Which May Reduce Your Taxes.
- 122 Deductions Which May Be Made by Salaried Men and Women.
- 172 Items Which You May Exclude From Your Gross Income.
- 48 Different Taxes Deductible by an Individual.
- 9 Types of Charitable Contributions Which Have Been Approved as Deductions.
- 225 Deductions Which May Be Made If You Are Engaged in a Trade, Business or Profession.
- 125 Changes During 1940 Caused by Statutes, Rulings, and Decisions.
- 33 Recommendations as to Security Transactions.

PRICE $1.00

YOUR CORPORATION TAX

A special tax book for Corporations exclusively By J. K. LASSER, C.P.A.

Taxes on both large and small corporations have been greatly increased, particularly by the new Excess Profits Tax Law of 1940—one of the most complicated measures ever to pass Congress! Mr. Lasser and his associates have spent a long time studying the many angles of corporate taxation as it now stands, and in this new book (also priced at only $1.00) they give a wealth of urgently needed help to executives, accountants, attorneys and tax advisers. "YOUR CORPORATION TAX" includes among it many simply worded sections—

Explains, in simple language, each and every section of the new Excess Profits Tax Law.

- What taxes both ordinary and exceptional types of corporations must pay.
- Whether your association, trust or partnership is subject to taxation as a corporation.
- Which taxes you are exempt from.
- What you must know about the new Excess Profits Tax calculations and exemptions.
- How to compute taxable income for 1940, credits, base period income, capital additions and reductions.
- How to calculate invested capital; the amount of capital stock, of paid-in surplus and stock dividends that may be included.
- How to calculate inadmissibles.
- How personal service companies can be exempted.
- Quick table of items of taxable income for normal and excess profits taxes.
- Check lists of 160 items which affect invested capital.
- Table giving quick check of effect of various dividends on equity capital.
- Easy method of computing daily changes in equity and borrowed capital during year.
- 6 possible calculations of base period earnings.
- Effect of capital changes on income credit in 5 cases.
- Income credit after tax free reorganizations in 9 cases.
- Impairment on earnings which need not reduce equity capital in 12 cases.
- Computation of earnings, profits, and inadmissible deductions.
- Elections that help reduce your normal and excess profits tax.
- Forms that permit you to make your own calculations, and be sure you omit nothing of value to you.

Snow Life for Motorists

"I was away over!" shouted one driver.

"You're crazy!" cried the other.

The dent in a fender was about 3 inches long. This happened at Pennsylvania Avenue and Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Became General Nuisance

By now probably all selects have spent some time searching for that elusive 2 feet of "skirmish line," a "left-handed" pistol, or at least a "grouper" for use in target practice. But it is generally conceded among the old timers that it was a mistake to send a certain rookie after "general orders" because they are now having as hard a time finding him.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Non-Civil Service appointments to the Federal service would have to be cleared through the Democratic National Committee under the plan of Chairman Ed Flynn. And before the committee would clear a job-hunter letters of indorsement would have to be presented from precinct, county, and State Democratic chairmen. The patronage proposal is one phase of a broad plan for rebuilding the Democratic Party machinery. Flynn is understood to have discussed it with President Roosevelt, who is said to have given his tentative approval.

Letters of indorsement from Democratic headquarters have had little or no influence on department heads for the past several years. Committee officials say their letters carried no weight whatsoever at the Defense Commission where many of the non-Civil Service jobs are held by Republicans. And needless to say, the Flynn plan is aimed mainly at defense agencies. Once the Ramspeck bill becomes effective the great bulk of Federal jobs will be brought under merit.

Representative Albert J. Engel, Michigan Republican, is conducting a one-man inquiry into several Federal agencies to find out how they are spending the money Congress appropriated last year. He has been spending most of his time at the War Department, but soon he'll move into the Labor Department and the Federal Security Agency. The energetic legislator examines personnel records, finds out who has been promoted and why, and checks up on the cost of new functions. He is a member of the appropriations sub-committee that recommends funds for War, Federal Security and Labor. His sincerity isn't questioned by the most partisan Democrat.

Former Civil Service Commissioner Sam Ordway has been reelected president of the Civil Service Reform League . . . It's interesting to note that the chief House opponent and proponent of the Hatch Act are now Federal officials. Former Representative Claude Parsons of Illinois, is assistant USHA administrator, and former Representative Jack Dempsey of New Mexico is a member of the Maritime Commission . . . Incidentally, Bertha Joseph, secretary to Senator Radcliffe of Maryland, has an amendment to the Hatch Act she hopes Congress will approve. The act, she explains, makes it a crime for a Federal jobholder to work for the reelection of political friends. Her amendment would make it a similar offense for a person to ask a member of Congress for a job or any other favor. It probably isn't necessary to add that Miss Joseph would like to see the Hatch Act killed and she believes her proposal would do it.

Internal Revenue has a flying club. Seven of the 17 members already have learned how to fly and its president, Louis A. Barr, will be the first to get his pilot's license. Two weeks ago 10 club members went to Florida for a week's vacation. It proved so successful that another journey is planned. The ten members made the trip in two autos and the plane. The cars were marked and the plane followed them. Stops were made and passengers traded seats. Arnold Nelson was the pilot. The club is limited to 20 members and it plans to buy a second plane soon. James Maynard, vice president, expects to solo soon. John Jensen is treasurer, and Jean Baker is secretary.

Agriculture is believed to have the oldest active Federal employe. His name is Benjamin A. Hummer, and he tends to the plants at the Beltsville experimental farm. He is 83. Hummer, a native of Falls Church, isn't working in a job that makes him eligible for retirement or else he would have been pensioned 13 years ago. His work must be satisfactory as he was given an administrative promotion last year. The oldest retired Government worker is Mark Thrash, of Chickamauga National Park in Tennessee. Thrash will be 120 this week. He wasn't retired until he was nearly 90.

No. 1 man in Who's Who in America is Olaf Sverre Aamodt, Agriculture Department scientist . . . H. W. V. Letkemann, an official of the Public Roads Administration, has an interesting hobby. He has persuaded fellow employes at PRA and neighbors at Greenbelt to get their blood tested. Letkemann carries with him an index of the type of blood of each person tested. When a friend or neighbor needs a blood transfusion Letkemann takes care of it . . . War Department credit union will hold its annual meeting this afternoon in Room 3029, Munitions Building . . . Fifty-six per cent of Uncle Sam's 1,150,000 employes are laborers or semi-laborers.

Church Group To Explain Welfare Aims

The accomplishments of the rapidly expanding welfare department of the Washington Federation of Churches will be dramatized tomorrow before church and social agency representatives.

Gathering for a conference at the Federation Building under the auspices of the department—a Community Chest-supported project—they will be told in skits, talks and seminars what the unit is doing in its role of liaison agency between church-sponsored welfare activities and the varieties of social services offered by the Chest and other local agencies.

At 2 p. m.—following a luncheon—they will draw up recommendations for future planning of the services which the social welfare department can render in linking churches and other social agencies in an effective program for human welfare in the community.

Mr. Tucker to Open Sessions

Opening the sessions at 11 a. m. will be the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, head of the Social Welfare Committee of the Federation and rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown.

In his federation social welfare work, Mr. Tucker cooperates with the Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the Social Welfare Department, which he initiated 3½ years ago.

Among those invited to attend the Tuesday parley will be members of the board of directors of the churches' federation, the executive committee of the Washington Council of Church Women and its advisory department, and others, including Dr. William Barnhart, new executive secretary of the Federation of Churches.

Church Women to Attend

Denominational representatives from the Washington Council of Church Women will include Mrs. T. S. Hughes, Baptist; Mrs. Frank Hamilton, Brethren; Mrs. John Mixon, Congregational; Mrs. Harry Delhm, Community; Mrs. Elton N. Brown, Disciples of Christ; Mrs. D. H. Carpenter, Episcopal; Mrs. S. W. Stewart, Evangelical; Mrs. Alfred Gould, Evangelical and Reform; Mrs. C. H. Hall, Friends denomination; Mrs. Anna Lewis, Greenbelt Community Church; Mrs. Frank Gummel, Lutheran; Mrs. Wallace N. Streeter, Methodist; Mrs. Frank M. Gray, Presbyterian, U. S. A.; Mrs. T. C. Carr, Presbyterian, U. S.; Mrs. Blackburn, United Brethren, and Mrs. Harvey Hawthorne, United Presbyterian.

In the cast of a playlet, "It's All in a Day's Work," to be presented during the afternoon, will be Mr. Mixon, Miss Frances Humphrey, Mrs. Tilford Dudley and Miss Alyne Munson.

Landscape Men To Discuss Their Role in Defense

The role of landscape artists in the national defense program will be discussed by the American Society of Landscape Architects at their forty-second meeting at 10 a. m. today in the Washington Hotel.

W. H. Harrison, director of the construction section, production division, advisory commission to the Council of National Defense, will speak at a 12:30 p. m. luncheon gathering.

Sessions will close with the annual dinner of the American Planning and Civic Association at 7 p. m. Wednesday when Newton B. Drury, director of the National Park Service, will speak.

Soldier's Elopement Plans Spoiled by Police

The long arm of Uncle Sam reached down from Camp Dix, N. J., to Washington yesterday and halted an elopement in mid-career.

It began when Pvt. W. E. McCarten, of Ninth Precinct, stopped a New Jersey automobile for a minor traffic violation. In it were a boy, 20, and a girl, 18, who said they had eloped from Camden, N. J. But they had no registration card for the automobile, so they were held at the police station while police got in touch with authorities at Camden.

They received a message to hold the boy. He was wanted at Camp Dix for "escaping confinement."

Storm Grounds Planes, Causes Many Accidents

as three hours late. At Washington Airport a low ceiling and low visibility led to the cancellation of all flights after 12:50 p. m. when sleet, soon to be followed by snow, first slashed into the Capital.

All in all, more than 40 flights were canceled, but fair flying conditions at Richmond and New York permitted travelers from other cities to pass over the city to their destinations.

The Weather Bureau predicted that the snowfall would reach 3 or 4 inches this afternoon before being turned to rain by temperatures as high as 35 degrees. But more snow may be expected with the evening's colder weather.

According to the Associated Press, the belt of heaviest snow extended from Omaha eastward across Iowa and northern Illinois. Des Moines and Iowa City both reported more than 12 inches. Subzero temperatures hit many Northern States, the lowest reading being 22 below zero in Grand Forks, N. Dak.

Two persons were killed and two others were in a serious condition in Casualty Hospital as a result of a traffic accident on Washington Boulevard, near Laurel, Md., early yesterday.

The dead were listed as:

Wister Goodman, colored, of 508 M Street Northwest, and Mayfield Park, 28, colored, of the same address.

Bus Driver Arrested

Mary Haden, 23, of 225 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and Gertrude Willis, 25, of 116 B Street Southeast, both colored, were taken to Casualty Hospital. Hospital attaches described the condition of both women as "serious." Miss Haden was reported as suffering from a compound fracture of the knee, multiple lacerations and shock. Miss Willis was said to be severely lacerated about the forehead and suffering from a possible skull fracture.

According to Justice of the Peace George Phillips, the automobile (driver not identified) crossed the white center marker of the highway in attempting to pass a truck, and sideswiped a Greyhound bus operated by Charles H. Best, 1705 F Street Northeast. The bus was forced into a ditch and was so badly damaged that passengers had to be transferred to another bus. No passengers on the bus were injured, however.

Best was taken into custody by Corpl. Edward Crewe, of the Maryland State Police, on a technical manslaughter charge, and arraigned before Justice Phillips, where he posted $1,000 bond for his appearance at a hearing before Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie, of Laurel, on January 31.

There were 77 accidents here between 8 a. m. and 11:30 p. m., police statistics revealed, with 37 occuring during the two-hour interval between 4 and 6 p. m. when Sunday country riders returned to find the city blanketed in snow. Fenders were scratched and dented as cars slid, but no one was reported injured in these accidents, police said.

Pvt. Norman S. Jones, 32, of 2759 Woodlet Street Northwest, a foot patrolman attached to First Precinct, suffered lacerations of the right knee when he slipped in an alley in the 900 block of Ninth Street Northwest yesterday. Jones was pursuing a colored man whom he suspected of tampering with an automobile.

The ice and snow tied up traffic for several hours last night on the Lee Highway and Leesburg Pike in Fairfax, Va., police reported.

The tieups were at Dranesville, on the Leesburg Pike, and on Lee Highway, 3 miles west of Fairfax. There were several minor skidding accidents at both points. The roads became passable after they had been sanded by trucks from the State highway department.

Two CCC members and a Virginia motorist were injured early yesterday in a three-car crash on Georgia Avenue near Montgomery Hills, Md.

Jack Heflin, 22, of the Garrett Park (Md.) CCC camp, was cut on the face and head. Victor Jenkins, the other CCC member, was cut on the chin, face and head. They were treated at Walter Reed Hospital. Aubrey Crickenberger, 42, of Suffolk, Va., who was in the second automobile, was taken to Emergency Hospital with a fractured wrist. The occupants of the third car were uninjured.

Planners Urge Zone Changes For District

A limited number of resident families per acre in the District should be specified in Washington's zoning act in the interest of better housing conditions, the American Institute of Planners declared here yesterday.

The institute went on record in favor of the change at the closing session of its annual meeting at the Washington Hotel, where more than 70 housing and city planning officials met for two days.

An increase of high buildings along Pennsylvania and Connecticut Avenues and Sixteenth Street are adding to the downtown traffic problem and are creating "a harmful effect on preserving the dominance of the Washington Monument and the Capitol dome on the city's skyline," the institute pointed out.

Urges Parking Spaces

An end was urged to the "spot zoning which gives individual lots special privilege at the expense of the general welfare of the people of the city."

The lack of any provisions in Washington's planning system requiring off-street parking for new business, apartment and residential developments also was scored.

Cooperation of the Alley Dwelling Authority with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the cooperation of the later with District and Federal agencies was praised.

New Officers Named

E. S. Draper, assistant administrator of the FHA, was elected president of the Institute. Hugh Pomeroy, of Richmond, executive director of the Virginia State Planning Board, was elected vice president. Harold H. Lewis, secretary of the New York Regional Planning Association, was named secretary-treasurer.

Elected to the board of governors were Alfred Beltman, of Cincinnati; Theodore McCroskey, of Chicago; Walter Blucher, Chicago; Gerald Guire, Nashville; L. D. Tilton, Los Angeles; Tracy Auger, Knoxville; A. C. Corvey, Cambridge, Mass.; Jacob Crane, assistant defense housing coordinator; and Mr. Bennett, of Milwaukee, Wis.

St. Mary Pelletier Lauded at Triduum By D. C. Rector

Preaching at the mass, he recalled that St. Euphrasia, first mother general of the Good Shepherd Order, was born during the French Revolution.

"Whenever the world is at its worst, God always raises up saintly men and women to overcome the evils of the day," said Msgr. McAdams, who is rector of St. Joseph's Catholic Church.

Injured Tar Left As George V Sails

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Wilfred J. Bowler, seaman of the 35,000-ton battleship King George V, which brought British Ambassador Lord Halifax to this country, was left behind at the Naval Academy Hospital suffering a broken leg when the warship sailed down Chesapeake Bay yesterday.

Bowler was injured early yesterday when a loading rigging hoisting supplies aboard collapsed, dropping Bowler and 19 other seamen into the bay.

9 Citizens' Units Meet This Week

Cross-Town Bus Plan, Problems On Liquor, Votes Highlight Programs

The proposed cross-town bus, District liquor problems and national suffrage will head the agenda at meetings of nine citizens associations, the Federation and the Northwest Council this week.

Five associations and the Council will meet tonight.

U. S. Attorney Edward M. Curran will speak before the Society of Natives at the Arts Club, 2017 I Street Northwest, according to President John M. Howard. Members of the Mid-City Association will discuss dedication of the new Second Police Precinct, at Fifth Street and New York Avenue Northwest, scheduled for February 17.

The Northwest Council tonight will meet at the home of Godfrey L. Munter, 3637 Patterson Street Northwest. North Capitol will induct 50 new members, climaxing a membership drive under newly elected President John H. Hardie.

The other associations will all meet tomorrow night. Conduit Road will meet then, instead of Thursday, as scheduled, because of the Birthday Balls and plans to concentrate on the cross-town bus scheme.

Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association will devote their Saturday meeting to a discussion of the report on controversial liquor questions here made by a special federation subcommittee headed by Harry H. Wender.

Representatives of all 65 associations have also been invited to attend an organized meeting Friday at 8 p. m., in the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, to discuss the proposed Municipal Assembly. Backing the plan is a committee of 44 citizens headed by Attorney Sefton Darr. Mrs. Roosevelt will speak.

The week's citizen association schedule follows:

Today

Georgetown, St. John's Church Hall Potomac and O Streets Northwest, 8 p. m.

Lincoln Park, Kinsman School, Fourteenth and E Streets Northeast, 8 p. m.

Midcity, Thomson School, Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, 8 p. m.

North Capitol, McKinley High School, Second and T Streets Northeast, 8 p. m.

Society of Natives, 2017 I Street Northwest, 8 p. m.

Northwest Council, 3637 Patterson Street Northwest 8 p. m.

Tuesday

Rev. F. J. Bishop Hits 'Defeatist' Views on Crisis

Criticizing, through implication, Col. Lindbergh's views on the international situation, the Rev. Frederick J. Bishop yesterday called for "men of vision, faith and Godliness" to help build a new world order.

"There are those among us who would tell us there is nothing we can do in the present situation; that we might as well give up," he said at the Men's Day celebration at Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, Tenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast. He added:

"If I thought that might was going to be right from now on, I would not preach to you this morning."

The outspoken pastor warned of the dangers of a "defeatist spirit" among the American people and urged a we'll-be-going-again-someday, thumbs-up attitude.

Magnate Credits Success to God At Church Rally

How "putting God on his board of directors" made him one of America's wealthiest businessmen and gave him power stronger than the giant road-building machines he makes, was told here last night by Robert G. Le Tourneau, of Toccoa, Ga.

Speaking at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church at the opening of a week's evangelistic meetings sponsored by the Christian Laymen's Crusade of Chicago, he described how his machines turn 125,000 pounds of dirt in one scoop at 35 miles an hour, but assured that "God's power is stronger than that."

Le Tourneau flew part way to Washington last night in his own Lockheed, which is equipped with a cot. He was grounded in Richmond, rode from there by train. Another nationally prominent layman will speak tonight at 8 o'clock.

Frustrated Yeggs Get Plugged Coins at Seat Pleasant Bank

SMALL HAUL—Kenny Wilson looks at the boarded door of the Seat Pleasant Bank which was broken into Saturday night. The robbers got some plugged coins

Would-be safe robbers who settled for a Canadian 50-cent piece and a few plugged coins after breaking into the Seat Pleasant (Md.) Bank early yesterday were being sought last night by G-men and Prince Georges County police.

Evidence of the bungled safe robbery—believed by police to have been the work of "amateur" yeggmen—greeted James Boardley, colored janitor, when he reported for work at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

A 500-pound metal filing cabinet, its lock unbroken, was resting on the front steps of the bank, and the front door of the bank was smashed.

Walter L. Green, one of Prince Georges County's two police judges and first vice president of the bank, said the cabinet contained only some papers. Apparently, he added, the yeggmen found it impossible to crack the vault, where the bank's funds were stored. There was some evidence the time lock had been tampered with, he said.

The Canadian 50-cent piece and some small coins that had been defaced were taken from a cash drawer, Judge Green said. He expressed the belief the robbers may have abandoned the metal cabinet on the front steps when someone approaching scared them off.

The yeggmen gained entrance by prying the protective iron grating off the front door and smashing the glass pane, Judge Green explained.

Representative Bonner's Office Ransacked by Ledge-Walker

A cat-footed marauder on an unknown quest ransacked the office of Representative Herbert C. Bonner (Democrat), of North Carolina, late Saturday or early yesterday, after sneaking along 100 feet of narrow ledge five stories above the ground.

Letters and papers were strewn over the desks and floor of room 502 in the Old House Office Building when the Congressman entered yesterday afternoon. It could not be determined at once whether anything was missing.

Entrance was made through a window overlooking a ledge which leads to a public lavatory 100 feet away, police believed. The office window was shattered and the lavatory window was found open.

Simple robbery was discarded as a motive when it was found that fountain pen, clocks and other valuables had not been touched. Capitol Police stationed a guard at the office yesterday, and an inventory of the Congressman's files will be made today in an effort to discover what, if anything, was stolen.

D. C. Grand Jury Calls Ohio Chiefs In Vote Probe

Ohio expenditures in the recent Presidential campaign will be investigated tomorrow by the special District grand jury on election offenses.

Special Assistant Attorney General Maurice M. Milligan said Ohio political leaders, and party men from elsewhere, would be questioned about the situation.

Milligan's aide, Assistant District Attorney William S. Tarver, said these witnesses were called:

J. F. Dittinger, chairman, and M. Ray Rollison, treasurer of the Democratic State Central Committee.

Ed Schorr, chairman, and Hugh Huntington, treasurer, of the Republican State Central Committee.

Richard W. Lawrence, treasurer, Republican State Central Committee, Buffalo.

L. D. Schrieber, treasurer, Democratic State Central Committee, Chicago.

O.P.M. Now Open For Business, Gets Telephone Number

REpublic 7500 is the new telephone number of the recently created Office of Production Management, of which William S. Knudsen is director general and Sidney Hillman is associate director general.

The new number became effective yesterday when a 10-position switchboard and dial intercommunicating telephone system was placed in service at the new Government building at Sixth and D Streets.

The National Defense switchboard still remains REpublic 5050.

Police Take 2 Burglary Suspects

Intruder, 20, Wounded in Chase; Northwest Drugstore Has Stick-up

Police captured two burglary suspects yesterday, after shooting and wounding one of them during a midnight chase through city streets. Members of a bandit gang, however, which has been robbing stores for the past two weeks, escaped with $15 in another raid last night.

Informed that three men were prowling at Henry's Gas Station, 911 First Street Northwest, Scout Car 11, with Privates A. R. Hellwig and W. A. Elliott raced to the scene.

The intruders scattered as the police arrived. Hellwig pursued one, fired three times, and wounded a 20-year-old fugitive, who ducked into an alley and tried to hide under an auto. Elliott captured a second suspect, 17 years old. The third escaped.

Two gunmen who police believe are members of a four-desperado gang, stepped into the Foxhall Drug Store, 1611 Foxhall Road Northwest, and waited for the manager, Ralph S. Kiefer, 45, of Arlington, to finish taking an order on the phone before producing their pistols.

They took $15 from the fountain cash register, but were unable to open the drug register, which jammed. Kiefer, and a clerk, Raymond Gotkin, 24, of 1556 Third Street Northwest, were locked in the washroom and had to break down the door to get out.

Earl D. Miller, 27, of 1704 Georgetown Road, Bethesda, stopped on the East-West Highway at the District line to give a lift to three hitch-hikers. One produced a gun, and they dispossessed him of his wallet, containing $4, his watch and his car.

Concrete Chunk Used To Break Window

Thieves who broke into a liquor store at 1917 Eighteenth Street Northwest used the nearest thing handy to make an entrance, police reported—they heaved a 20-pound piece of concrete through the window.

Samuel Schwartz, proprietor, told police 18 half pints of whisky were taken.

Miss Skinner to Debut Here as Star of 'Theatre'

Signed by John Golden, Producer of 'Claudia;' Ethel Barrymore Awaits an Anniversary; This, That and the Other About the Theater

A BIT OF GOOD NEWS, percolating from a distance through the excitement of the President's Birthday Celebrations, is to the effect that on Saturday Cornelia Otis Skinner was signed by John Golden for the stellar role in his forthcoming production of "Theatre," dramatized by Guy Bolton from the novel by Somerset Maugham. The more propitious aspect of the announcement is that the new play will have its premiere in the National Theater in this city on Easter Monday, April 14.

BELL

This will mark Miss Skinner's first starring appearance in a regular Broadway play production. Having devoted herself principally in recent years to the enactment of her own unique monodramas, Miss Skinner has largely obscured the fact that early in her career she acted secondary parts in "Will Shakespeare," "White Collars," "The Wild Westcotts" and other plays in New York. More recently, she starred in a road tour revival of "Candida," at the National, and last spring portrayed a notable Angelica in the Players' Club brief New York revival of "Love for Love." "Theatre," however, will signalize her first stellar engagement in a new Broadway play of the first rank.

Washington is fortunate in being assigned to see it first. It is Mr. Golden, incidentally, who is presenting "Claudia" at the National tonight, with Frances Starr, Dorothy McGuire and Donald Cook in the principal roles. For which further thanks.

The hurly-burly of the Inauguration over and the Birthday celebrations under control, picture previews are beginning to bob up again. Tomorrow morning at 11, Richard A. Rowland will unwind "Cheers for Miss Bishop," his first production for United Artists, before an engraved invitation audience in the Circle Theater, 2105 Pennsylvania Avenue, Northwest. It is in this subject, covering a period of 60 years, that Martha Scott achieves a personal triumph that is said to place the picture on an easy parity with "Good-Bye Mr. Chips" and "Stella Dallas." On Wednesday at 12:30, Paramount's Technicolor production of "Virginia," costarring Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll, will be unstrung for the drama desks, with little Carolyn Lee and Stirling Hayden, also prominent in the cast, present to see themselves as others see them.

According to weekend announcement by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers, "Virginia" will be given its public world premiere on Thursday of this week, January 30, at the Earle Theater. The first showing will be clebrated simultaneously in Richmond, Charlottesville, Norfolk and Lynchburg, Va. By this arrangement, patrons of the special Thursday midnight performance, with all of the visiting stars in attendance and the stage bills of the Earle and Capitol theaters combined, will view a new picture and not a repetition of "North West Mounted Police," now in its second week on Thirteenth Street.

Hold your horses, the elephants and the gorillas are coming! My good friend and encyclopedia of the big tops, Mr. Melvin D. Hildreth, it is who relays word that the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus will break out its canvas in Washington this year on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 15, 16 and 17. The many features will include the "Honeymoon of Cuban Toto and the Long-Loved Gargantua," who will have solemnized their nuptials in New York a bit earlier. New performers will hail largely from South America, Mr. Hildreth says, the European folk being a shade difficult to contact and contract for transparent and explosive reasons.

Reverting briefly, Mary Anderson, who is "introduced" to the motion picture public in "Cheers for Miss Bishop," actually already is appearing on the screen at Loew's Palace. She was one of the myriad young Southerners who tested for the role of you-know-who in "Gone With the Wind." She didn't get that part, of course, but she did capture the role of Maybelle Merriweather in the scenes at the bazaar in Atlanta. The part was a mite microscopic, but it was enough to call Mary Anderson to the attention of Director Tay Garnett, who forthwith signed her for the role of Amy Saunders, one of the more important characters in "Miss Bishop."

Ethel Barrymore, currently enjoying the greatest success of her career as the Miss Moffatt of "The Corn Is Green," will celebrate her fortieth anniversary as a Broadway star on February 4. Miss Barrymore's name went up in lights a few days after her first performance in Clyde Fitch's "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines," at the Garrick Theater, New York, on February 4, 1901. In the week in which she was elevated to stardom by Charles Frohman, a New York visitor might have seen Margaret Anglin in "Mrs. Dane's Defense," Maude Adams in "L'Aiglon," Julia Marlowe in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Viola Allen in "The Palace of the King," or Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-One." London was mourning the death of Queen Victoria and cheering Kaiser Wilhelm. Carrie Nation was given the old heave-ho into the calaboose in Topeka, Kans., for smashing up a saloon, and William A. Brady announced that he was about to revive "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with Wilton Lackaye in the leading role. That was the one that played the Auditorium Theater, out in Chicago when I was only so many years old, and was so big they had to have two Uncle Toms, two Little Evas, two Topsies and two Ohio Rivers!

Benefit Play A Rousing Hit At National

By Nelson B. Bell

With the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and White House party occupying the Presidential box to add the final fillip to an exciting evening in the theater, an audience that filled every available inch of space in the National last night reveled in the suavely polished "command performance" of John van Druten's "Old Acquaintance," one of the most important events in the President's Birthday Celebrations for the benefit of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

In his new play, Mr. Van Druten has transferred his scene and his characters from his native England to these United States without loss of the penetrating acumen and literate charm that have characterized so many of his earlier works for the stage. The chief protagonists of his adultly "sophisticated" and sometimes daringly frank three acts and two delightful female novelists of widely divergent tastes, impulses, abilities and mental processes. The one is a fashionable, alive and warmly passionate woman, who produces an occasional important book, the while she finds zestful relaxation in more numerous unconventional attachments. The other, a prolific writer of "best sellers," keen-witted, shallowly sentimental, jealous and utterly unable to hold the interest or affection of husband, daughter or friends, with the single exception of the "old acquaintance" she injures most. The sudden infatuation of Mildred Drake's daughter for the latest and youngest of Katherine Markham's lovers is the lever with which the author pries into a brittle and mature comedy the requisite warmth of feeling and touch of sound humanity to give it body and ballast.

Piece Is Perfectly Played

Under the deft direction of Auriol Lee, Jane Cowl and Peggy Wood prove the perfect actresses for the complete realization of the high comedy, kindly emotion and glossy urbanity with which Mr. Van Druten has endowed his play. To the initiate of the theater, there is a vaguely reminiscent quality of "First Lady" in the delicate shadings of their frequent tilts, lively recriminations and inevitable reconciliations.

They are handsomely assisted by a small but scrupulously chosen cast of supporting players, led by Adele Longmire and Kent Smith, as the perplexed debutante daughter and equally confused lover, who finds a man's life at 30 quite as baffling as a girl's is at 19. There is a freshness, naivette and exhilarating independence in Miss Longmire's portrayal that is only occasionally marred by too great a volume of voice. Hunter Gardner's role, as the alienated Preston Drake, is brief but enormously telling. Anna Franklin and Edna West complete the Markham and Drake apartments in the capacity of efficient maids.

It is a lamentable circumstance that a "command performance" always is limited to a single capacity of the National Theater. Last night's uncounted curtain calls attested to the treat in store for Washington when "Old Acquaintance" returns—as it unfailingly must—for a later regular engagement.

Gayety

The "daily double" at the Gayety this week is composed of the dark-eyed Zorita and the inimitable Dusty Fletcher.

Zorita's sensational dancing has made her a popular favorite here, and, in the current attraction, this daring siren introduces several new musical specialities which top all her previous successes.

One of the greatest colored comedians to play this house, Dusty Fletcher, is in this week's bill, funnier than we've ever seen him. His numbers are novel and mirth-provoking without the aid of any questionable humor. Working with Fletcher is "Rubber Legs" Williams, a sepia personality who, at times, all but steals the scenes from his funny friend. Williams, by the way, is the chap who introduced the dance "Truckin" in a local theater. Johnny Barry, a local lad, plus Evelyn Brooks, an excellent "talking woman," and Wen Miller add much to the comedy of the performance.

The distaff portion of the attraction boasts such charmers as Diane Johnson, Sally O'Day, Isobel Brown and Arlette Dare. Miss Brown's musical contribution to the show is nothing short of sensational. The ballet numbers of Miss Dare are well executed. —ART JOHN.

as they soon will be seen in the costellar roles in Universal's new picturization of "Back Street," first filmed in 1932 with John Boles and Irene Dunne in the same parts. "Back Street" will be given its world premiere in Miami, Fla., at the end of this month

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Jan. 26.

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: Last year M-G-M purchased the movie rights of "Madame Curie," the biography written by her daughter, Eve. Sidney Franklin was assigned to produce it, and the title role was given to Greta Garbo . . . Miss Garbo's favorite writer, Salka Viertel, was retained to write the screen story, but couldn't do it. Other writers—some the best scenarists in the world—were hired to write the script, but each reported no success, and the story has been shelved . . . Despite the fact that Mme. Curie's life was one of great, universal interest, none of the famed writers could find a solution to the elementary movie-story problem: "Why should such a good-looking young girl as Greta Garbo start studying chemistry?"

LYONS

WASHINGTON DEPT.: Harry Carey, who played the Vice President in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," was at the Stork Club and told of his meeting with John Nance Garner . . . "Mr. Carey," said Garner, who had been told of Carey's movie salary, "you've made more out of the Vice Presidency than I ever did." . . . "That's because here in Washington," said Carey, "there are more people angling for money than in Hollywood" . . . Garner then invited the actor to drink. "Okay," Carey told the waiter, "bring me some of that irrigation stuff" . . . "Water?" asked the incredulous Vice President. "Never drink water. There's bugs in it."

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Eleanor Roosevelt told Mrs. Raymond Massey about the legend of the ghost in the Lincoln Room at the White House . . . She told of the member of the household who had reported seeing the figure of Lincoln seated on the bed and removing his boots slowly—and dropping them on the floor . . . "Oh, no," vowed the wife of Raymond Massey, "that wasn't my pop."

LOCAL NEWS: Mrs. Herman Rauschning—whose husband, the former intimate of Hitler's, wrote "The Voice of Destruction"—is in America now and is writing a book . . . Burris Jenkins, jr., the cartoonist, will fly to London . . . Joe E. Brown is expected to take over the role played by the late Joe Penner in the traveling company of "Yokel Boy" . . . Al Jolson notified the staff of his show last night that he'll go to Miami for a short time and then tour the show for at least 30 weeks . . . Alfred Hitchcock's new picture, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," originally was called "Mr. and Mrs," but that title coudn't be used, because it conflicted with the title of the famous Briggs cartoons . . . George Jessel and his bride will open, separately, in rival cafes in Boston.

RADIO DEPT.: Mickey Rooney, who was one of the entertainers at Constitution Hall's Inaugural Gala this week, saw Ethel Barrymore studying her script before the broadcast. Miss Barrymore was puzzled over the pronunciation of one word in the Walt Whitman quotation she was to read. It appeared in the phrase about democracy and "the minute of an individual" . . . "Should that word be pronounced 'minn-uti' or 'my-newt'?" Miss Barrymore asked her friends. "I wonder which pronunciation Whitman meant?" . . . "Here let me see it," Rooney volunteered, took the script from the startled star, glanced at it and said: "It should be read 'my-newt.'" Then Mickey Rooney, the Hollywood youngster, returned the script to the famous star of the theater to whom he had just told how to read a line.

CRIME DEPARTMENT: At the White House ceremonies last week Thurman Arnold saw David Dubinsky smoking a cigar, and asked the labor leader whether he had an extra one . . . "I have," said Dubinsky, "but, frankly, I'm afraid to offer it to you. You might try to have me indicated under the Corrupt Practices Act" . . . "No, not if you give the cigar to me," Arnold explained, "but only if you should give it to some one else."

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Aldous Huxley, one of Britain's great writers and member of an illustrious family distinguished in the fields of science and literature, at last has found the recognition which he felt is his due . . . Huxley is in Hollywood now. And in "Daily Variety" there he found the lines which crown his glory. For in the department caption "Ill in Pix" was his listing, "Al Huxley."

FINANCE DEPT.: Ann Corio, the strip-teaser, this month will make her final payment on a $100,000 annuity . . . A broker suggested to her that the return on such an investment was poor—that she could increase her income by purchasing the stocks and bonds which now can be secured at bargain prices. "Not me," said Miss Corio. "I'd rather sleep on 3 per cent than walk the floor all night at 5 per cent."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 26 (INS).—If all goes well, Jean Gabin, often called France's foremost actor, wil check in at Twentieth Century-Fox early in March. Reservations have been made for him to sail February 22 by Charles Feldman who handled the deal.

PARSONS

Charlie also brought Charles Boyer here and was responsible for Michele Morgan's American contract. Gabin has played in such pictures as "Pepe le Moko," "La Grande Illusion," "They Were Five" and "La Bete Humaine" ("The Human Beast") and has built up a big following both in France and in America.

I was greatly amused to hear that Errol Flynn's next picture will be "They Died With Their Boots On." No kidding— that's the title they are giving Errol's new one, based on the life of Gen. Custer. That certainly has a good old Western tang and I reckon if Gen. Custer is where he knows all about it, even he would have to smile.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: John Barrymore turning the charm on Barbara Jo Allen (Vera Vague) at the Beverly Derby; there's a lot of talk that Ken Duncan is secretly married to Pat Winters, a non-professional; Rudy Vallee (and this time it's the truth), taking Gene Tierney and her mother to the Mocambo; at a dinner party of more than ordinary interest were Carole Landis with Cedric Gibbons, the Gary Coopers, the David Selznicks and the Bill Goetzes. Carole was certainly devoting herself to Cedric.

The Darryl Zanucks also took "cook's night out" to entertain the Francis Hartleys, Joseph Schenck and the Charles Feldmans; Edmund Grainger is again paying court to Will Rogers' pretty daughter, Mary; Alice Faye is down with the flu; Warner Baxter, ten pounds lighter and looking like a million, in town from Palm Springs; Brenda Joyce and Owen Ward called back from their honeymoon—not because the bride starts a picture, but because the groom is needed at Paramount to help audit the books.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 26.

When I first met Carmen Miranda on "The Road to Rio" set she told me she didn't want to go back to New York to do a show for the Shuberts. I said, "Well, with that personality, you can get anything you want." And boy! She's gotten it. Darryl Zanuck paid the Shuberts for her services, she's signed a three-pictures contract. "Rio" is so good they're rushing it through for preview in five weeks. Maybe we'd better have more South Americans—they get things done. But then, there's only one Miranda.

HOPPER

Bob Hope complained about doing the same scene over and over in his picture "Caught in the Draft." Came the day when he had kissing scenes with Dottie Lamour. There wasn't a yap in a carload from either Hope or Dottie—they kept at it the whole day. Then people tell you making movies is work!

In this talk of war, which has us so upset that we can't concentrate on our daily duties, I'd like to remind you of the Norwegian painter, Edward Munch, who passed away six months ago. When his neighbors were asked what he died of, they said, "He no longer desired to live." His idea was that we could have a paradise on earth if people wished it so, but not under the dictators' plan.

"Love thy neighbor as thyself," was his motto, and he made it live. He painted the country he loved, hung his paintings in an old shed, where they were rained and snowed on, and when asked why he did this, replied, "If they can't stand the life I endure, they're no good."

He hoped his paintings would hang in factories, schoolrooms—any place where hard-working people, who hadn't time to sit and gaze out the window, could look up and see beauty. He once got 50,000 kronin for a painting. At that time a factory in his town needed a rest room for its workers, and good soup for luncheon, which the owner said he couldn't afford to supply. The 50,000 kronin went for that need.

Munch once said, "What's more important in life than walking through the streets of your village and having your neighbors smile upon you?" It looks as though that kind of living was passing from the face of the earth.

When I was invited to an "executives' secretaries" dinner at the Los Angeles Times, I didn't know what it was all about. But I soon found out. There were hundreds of secretaries with their bosses, who are heads of important businesses here—executives of banks, airlines, railroads, real estate, oil companies, judges, lawyers, doctors, etc. (And here I've been under the misguided impression that secretaries and their bosses only got together on motion picture screens!)

Once a year they entertain their bosses, and once a year their husbands. What a way to engender good will!

Good to see George Murphy recovered from his illness, dancing with his wife at the new Mocambo Cafe, with Ann Sothern and Roger Pryor in the party. Place was crowded, and quite right, too. It's charming—and has most flattering lighting in town. Phil Ohman's music is something to dream about. The only thing that distressed me was wondering when these beautiful birds, flying around inside an aviary, get any sleep.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

What seems to be the most unnecessary bit of legal business transacted of late is Promoter Mike Jacobs' contract with Red Burman whereby Burman agrees to give Joe Louis a return bout in the event he wins Louis' title. Surely Uncle Mike smiled at least inwardly when he wrote that clause into the contract.

POVICH

There is no more evidence that Burman will lift Louis' title on Friday evening in their Garden bout than there is evidence that Hitler will sue for peace before the week is out. When Burman steps into the ring to keep his date with the champion he will be an 8-to-1 shot.

The odds against Burman are understandable. The only man of any repute he ever licked was Tommy Farr and that victory brought Burman dubious distinction because Farr never won a fight in this country. And when Burman attempted to beat Farr again, in England, the Britisher squared accounts by a wider margin than was Burman's in their first bout.

Down in Cuba where he is commanding the Fifth Battalion of the U. S. Marines, Heinie Miller, former president of the National Boxing Association, is raising a lone thin voice in Burman's behalf. Miller thinks the Baltimore boxer has a chance with Louis, a pretty good one.

"Burman's a stiff body puncher, and Louis has never met that kind," writes Miller, but we can't understand what he is getting at. The only times Louis has been hurt were when he was hit on the chin. Old Jimmy Braddock almost dumped him on the floor with an uppercut to the jaw in their Chicago bout, and a year before that Max Schmeling knocked Louis out with punches to the chin. It was a left hook to the chin by Tony Galento that also had Louis on the floor.

In New York this week, they are offering 4 to 1 that Burman is knocked out by Louis, and 2 to 1 that it happens inside of three rounds. If the fight goes beyond three rounds, it can be catalogued as an upset.

Joe Louis' misfortune is that anytime he doesn't knock an opponent out within five rounds, the critics begin to look askance and politely suggest that Louis is slipping. The Brown Bomber has, unfortunately, set too high a standard as champion. Most of his knockout victories have been so rapid that he is expected to win every fight with great haste.

Even when Louis knocked Galento out in four rounds, it was called a dull performance by Louis. In fact it was Galento who won the greater acclaim because he had Louis on the floor. But, paradoxically, that bout appeared to this department to be a vindication for Louis. He demonstrated that night that he could get up off the floor and still knock his man out.

Jack Dempsey had his share of dull bouts, but he has gone down in history as probably the greatest of the champions. He couldn't stop old Tommy Gibbons in a 15-round bout, and years before old Bill Brennan carried Dempsey to 12 rounds in the original garden before Dempsey could win.

Gene Tunney didn't look like a great fighter or even a good one in his farewell battle after which he retired undefeated. That was the night when slow-moving Tom Heeney, not a great puncher or even a good boxer, carried Tunney into the late rounds before he was forced to quit, chiefly because Tunney was poking his thumb in Heeney's eye.

Yet when Louis permits such as Bob Pastor or Arthur Godoy to go the limit with him, it is called some sort of a disgrace to the championship. No man except Schmeling who ever stood up and willingly fought Louis has been able to stand him off. And in return bouts, Louis caught up with Pastor and Godoy and knocked them out.

Extract Louis from the current heavyweight division and it's a sorry looking crop of heavies. Such as Burman and Gus Dorazio whom Louis will fight this winter are mere foils in the champion's training program that will carry him up to his June affair with Billy Conn.

The Conn fight seems to be nothing to disturb the Louis camp, either. Boiled down, Conn is merely a heavy middleweight who can't hit, and he'll be conceding nearly 30 pounds to Louis, who can hit. Louis will never be rated as one of the smart boxers among the heavyweight champions—his thinking processes are too slow—but no heavyweight titleholder ever threw a punch faster than Louis. And some time during the evening, he'll catch up with Conn.

And after Conn what? There's Lou Nova and Max Baer and Tony Galento hovering around the fringe of challengers, but at various times they have all eliminated themselves when Louis wasn't eliminating them personally. We started out talking about the Louis-Burman fight, but somewhere we got off the track, which is probably just as well because that one doesn't seem to be very important.

With CONSIDINE

San Francisco, Jan. 26.—Slip Madigan's woes with St. Mary's football team (he had to seize the Gaels' end of a Fordham-St. Mary's football "gate" to collect his more than $30,000 in back pay) were trifling compared to his current troubles.

CONSIDINE

This time it isn't dough, at least not Slip's dough. This time Slip is battling the toughest foe in the sports business, the weather. He is general manager, at $15,000 a year, of the new Golden Gate race track, near here. It is a sumptuous plant, but it is harder to open than an oyster with your thumb. The plant cost more than $2,000,000. It was originally scheduled to begin the breed-improving of adjacent horse players on December 28. But it had yet to open when these deathless lines were writtn. It had lost every round to the incessant rain, and its gleaming pari-mutuel machines still pined for that good old spinach diet.

I am leaving here presently on the S. S. Lurline, for Los Angeles, so it is safe to report that it has been raining in San Francisco since December 17. On December 28, the first frustrated opening date for the track, the racing strip was so close to being a large mud doughnut that a tractor actually got stuck in the homestretch. It was even worse on New Year's Day, and it has been ditto each fruitless opening day since then.

Jerry Giesler, the crack criminal lawyer who is this State's highly respected boxing and racing commissioner, adamantly refuses to let the breed-improving begin until there is no longer any risk that the horses will leave legs stuck in the mud on the run-to-the-wire.

There have been countless directors' meetings, yelps from the minority stockholders, anguished public announcements by Madigan (who retains enough native wit to call his track "The Aquacade"), growls from the stable owners, sniffles from the water-locked barns, and rain. The only nonbeefing element seems to be the breed known generously as homo sapiens. All local horse park suckers are displaying heroic patience in the face of what must be an excruciating suspense.

After being tormented by such tantalizing sights as 40,000 sightseers visiting the mud-bound track on New Year's Day—just to look—the harried directors dug deeper into their pained pockets and ordered the whole confounded racing strip removed. Great steamshovels scooped up the so-called loam—which possessed a treacherous amount of clay—and dumped it in the infield. Madigan and company had spent $75,000 on the infield garden, but the rain washed it all away, and now the infield is a lumpy no man's (or horse's) land.

The contractors scooped down to the bottom of the racing strip, put in a layer of pulverized red rock, some other geological blotting paper, and finally started putting on a good trick coating of sand. Sand tracks are pretty much taboo these days, but the boys were desperate. However, the rains kept coming in such quantity that not even the sand could blot them. Late last week the surfacing-with-sand job had to be stopped. The sand trucks were sinking into the primordial ooze, while the devout Madigan prayed for a 24-hour drought.

Other items contribute to Slip's migraine. The ravenous gulls from the nearby bay and their gluttonous brothers from Joe DiMaggio's fish wharf have been pouncing on the Golden Gate track like a bum on a Corona Corona butt. Seems that somebody dropped a hot dog the day they let those 40,000 visitors in the place, and a blubbermouth gull, who was downwind from the tid-bit, squawked the word around. Gulls get so thick around the joint that Madigan secured permission from the city fathers and game wardens to shoot some of them (the gulls). Twenty of these most graceful and least tidy ozone hoboes were shot out of the sky as a grim warning to the other 94,763,128 to stay away. None of them seemed to get the hidden meaning.

Also, every native crackpot has suggested ways of sopping up the racing strip. Chemicals have been kneaded into that unhappy mocha, and pools of gasoline have been burned on its top. Rollers of every type and weight have been run over it, trying to squeeze the water someplace else.

But no dice. Not a single horse has galloped on what is now the most expensive racing strip in horse history. Too risky. The harried directors have had to supply feed for the needier stables, and if the horses don't watch out they'll get muscled away from that bran and oat bin by some of the hungry owners.

Crowd of 800 Braves Snowstorm to See Game Staged Here For Paralysis Fund

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Washington's professional Brewers outscored Catholic and Georgetown University basketball teams each by 10 points to run up a 52-32 total against the collegians in an infantile paralysis benefit fund game last night in Riverside Stadium before 876 spectators.

The American League professional team outscored Catholic University in the first half, 22-12, and then piled up a 30-20 margin on Georgetown in the second. The fund realized $250.30 after expenses had been deducted. The crowd was disappointing to promoters.

Coach Elmer Ripley kept his Georgetown regulars on the bench most of the final 20 minutes and an entire reserve line-up played most of the last ten minutes of the Hoyas' turn on the court.

Hoyas Hold Brewers

Georgetown's regulars held the Brewers virtually on even terms in their brief stay although excessive whistle-tooting by Referee Dallas Shirley slowed up the game and both teams. The Brewers made 18 out of 26 allotted foul shots in the entire game, although they were doing most of the roughing in their professional style.

A Catholic University team that has lost seven straight games in as many starts was the real hero as they held the pros scoreless from the floor for over six minutes and when Nat Frankel made the first Brewer field goal, Gene Daly tied the score a minute later at 6-all.

Coach Ripley, of Georgetown, lost little time yanking his first string men off the court after he had witnessed a few minutes of his team's play, as he wants no injuries to slow up the Hoyas in their stretch drive to maintain a 10-game winning streak.

Ben Kramer was responsible for the pro team's drive against Georgetown as he tossed in 14 points, nearly half his team's total, in the second period, four from the foul line and five field goals, mostly followup specialties.

Georgetown trailed once at 13-13 but with Jim Kiernan and Bill Bornheimer in there just a few minutes they were always behind. The score was 26-20 with seconds to play when big Ben Goldfadden tapped in two last minute baskets while standing all alone.

Test Not Proved

The game was booked as a test of a good pro team against college basketball but with Catholic University represented by a team without a victory to its credit and with the Hoyas making free use of second stringers it did not prove a thing. The bigger and heftier Brewers made only five more field goals than the college clubs during the entire 40 minutes.

The Brewers pulled away from Catholic University midway in the initial half of the first encounter after Coach Fod Cotton's boys had surprised with an excellent showing against the much bigger and more experienced professionals.

With the exception of Phil Rabin, the Brewers were all bigger than the C. U. players but for eight minutes it looked as though C. U. might win its first game of the season as it was only a single point back.

Rabin, Nat Frankel and Ben Goldfadden took part in a pro scoring

Nats Meet Yanks Here In First Night Game

New York Also Opening Day Foe of Nats; Each Club to Make One Night Appearance At Griffith Stadium; Yanks on May 28

(Schedule On Page 18.)

By Shirley Povich.

The New York Yankees will be a party to the inauguration of big league baseball at night at Griffith Stadium.

Announcement today of the official American League schedule for 1941 reveals that the Yankees will be the first night-game opponents of the Nats here, with the date set for Wednesday, May 28.

Six other night games have been scheduled by the Nats for Griffith Stadium this season. Each club in the league will make one night-game appearance here following the completion of the $130,000 lighting system now under construction.

The battle with the Yankees is the only night game scheduled for May. Two games will be played under the lights in June, two in July and one each in August and September. Following the games with the Yankees, the other clubs will make a night-game appearance here in this order: St. Louis, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Chicago.

The complete list of Griffith Stadium's night games:

June 18—St. Louis
June 27—Boston.
July 23—Detroit.
July 30—Cleveland.
August 6—Philadelphia.
September 9—Chicago.

Wednesday will be Griffith Stadium's night-game date, with five of the seven nocturnal affairs scheduled for that day of the week. The only exceptions are the Friday game with the Red Sox and the Tuesday game with Chicago.

The 1941 season will open in Washington on Monday, April 14, a day before the season will be launched in any other big league city, and the opening game attraction will also be the Yankees.

April 14 has been designated as a special opening in Washington because the schedule originally called for the Nats to play in Boston on April 15, when the remainder of the league stages its inaugurals. It has been league custom for more than ten years to permit the Washington team to open the season at home in order that the start of the season may be graced with the presence of the President of the United States.

Griffith Stadium has been assigned only one of the three holiday double-headers at home—the Decoration Day games on May 30, when the Nats will be hosts to the Athletics. The Fourth of July will find the Nats playing at Yankee Stadium, and Labor Day sends the Nats to Boston for a double-header with the Red Sox.

Following the opening game here with the Yanks on April 14, the Nats will entrain for Boston where they will figure in the Red Sox opening the following day. After a three-game series in Boston, the Nats will return to Griffith Stadium for two more battles with the Yankees in the first week of the season.

Coincidentally with the announcement of the league schedule, it was revealed that the annual all-star game between the American and National Leagues had been set for Tuesday, July 8, at Detroit.

Georgetown Slight Choice Over PennState

On the basis of comparative scores against common opponents, Georgetown rates as a slight favorite over Penn State for the important Eastern clash here Wednesday night at Riverside Stadium.

The Hoyas and Nittany Lions, old rivals in the now defunct Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, have each played and beaten New York U. and Navy.

Penn State stopped N. Y. U.'s eight-game winning streak in the Violet gym, winning by 13 points. Georgetown caught the Violets on the rebound at Riverside and defeated them by nine points. The Penn State victory was a little more impressive, although the Violets closed within four points at one time. Georgetown led all the way in its game with N. Y. U., and were in complete command except a few minutes in the second half, when the New Yorkers pulled within a point.

The biggest difference was in the Navy game, where the Nittany Lions were forced to come from behind in the last three minutes of play to beat Navy, 23-20, with seven consecutive points. Georgetown rolled over the Middies, 38-18, holding them to a single point at halftime. Both games were played at Navy. The Middies made Georgetown look even better by whipping North Carolina's Southern Conference champions three days later.

The varsity game Wednesday will be preceded by a freshman tilt between the Hoyas and Catholic U. freshmen, the first athletic contest in 20 years between the schools.

Bonura May Be Inducted in Army Within 5 Months

New Orleans, Jan. 27 (AP).—Henry (Zeke) Bonura may be shouldering a rifle instead of swinging a baseball bat for the Chicago Cubs next summer, J. J. Garvey, chairman of his local selective service board, said today.

BONURA

"Zeke," the Cubs' colorful first baseman, is now in Class 1 and if pronounced fit will automatically move into Class 1-A and be subject to call for one year of service, Garvey said.

He added that he expected Bonura to be called into training within five months, "possibly in July."

Kovacs Scores Over Riggs In Net Finals

By the United Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 26.—Lanky Frank Kovacs, the California tennis clown who turned serious, today won his third winter tournament singles title in as many starts, defeating Bobby Riggs, former national champion, 13—11, 2—6, 6—2, 6—1, in finals of the Florida West Coast championship.

Kovacs capitalized on a smashing service and well-placed returns to wear down Riggs, the Chicago player now ranked No. 2 nationally. The two battled on fairly even terms for the first two sets. Kovacs won the first after a hard struggle and Riggs took the second.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, of Brookline, Mass., ranked sixth nationally, won the women's singles title. She defeated Dorothy May Bundy, nation's No. 3 amateur from Santa Monica, Calif., 7—5, 6—1.

Kovacs In Form

Kovacs was riding the crest of winning form. He previously won the Dixie and Florida State tournaments this season, beating National Champion Don McNeill in each. McNeill was not entered in the West Coast championship here.

Riggs tired in the third set of today's finals, and the tall Californian then had little trouble in running out the match for a victory.

Kovacs, after Riggs weakened, showed some of the clowning and temperament for which he had been noted on Eastern and California courts, but he stayed to earnest, straight tennis until his lead was comfortable.

Champions Not Entered

Kovacs' national rating is No. 3, behind McNeill and Riggs. Kovacs' home is in Oakland, Calif.

Neither of the defending champions—Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg., and Pauline Betz, Rollins College, Fla.—entered the West Coast tournament this year.

Mrs. Cooke, after dropping three of the first four games, surged ahead and Miss Bundy was not able to threaten again.

Greg Rice to Run In Penn A.C. Event

Philadelphia, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Gregory Rice, former Notre Dame middle-distance runner and present 2-mile indoor record holder, will run in the Penn A. C. 2-mile event at Philadelphia's Convention Hall, February 7, Director Lawson Robetrson announced tonight.

Robertson also disclosed that Luigi Beccali, of Italy, 1932 Olympic metric mile titlist, would compete in the mile event.

Sammy Snead Wins Bing Crosby Tourney

By the United Press

Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., Jan. 26.—Samuel Jackson Snead, the slope-shouldered sharpshooter from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., rustled home 10 minutes ahead of a sudden rainstorm today with a subpar 69 to capture Bing Crosby's $3,000 Pro-Amateur Golf Tournament. It was Snead's third such victory in five years.

SAMMY SNEAD

With the major portion of a record crowd of 4,000 persons following him, Snead rounded the first turn of Rancho Santa Fe course in 34 then finished with a 35 for an aggregate 136 for two days of play. His total was just a single stroke lower than that of Craig Wood—who added another second to his long list of heartbreaks.

Snead Has Hot Hand

The second half of the dual tourney—the low ball team competition— was won by Leonard Dodson of Springfield, Mo., and Ray Watson of Kansas City with the remarkable score of 124, the lowest ever registered for this type of play. Dodson had an individual 139 and was helped 15 strokes by his amateur partner.

Snead, winner here in 1937 and again in 1938, played every hole in par or under. His drives kept him within easy reach of the greens throughout the afternoon and for once his iron work was equal to his ability with the woods. The victory was his first of the new season and netted a $500 first prize.

Back of Wood, who saw his chance for a tie slip away when a 12-foot putt stopped an inch short of the cup on the final green, were tied Harold McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., and Bill Nary, the 26-year-old home professional, for third place with 138.

Five Pros Tie for Fifth

Five other pros were bracketed in a tie for fifth at 139 and three more knotted for tenth money at 140. Players who failed to break par by more than three strokes were out of the money.

Although a light rain fell in the morning the course was in fair condition for the final round and the scores dropped accordingly. The gallery also followed such characters as Guy Kibbee, Host Crosby, Babe Didrikson, Wrestler George Zaharias, Johnny Weissmuller and Jimmy McLarnin. The storm held off in the afternoon until Snead had finished, but the last dozen

Jimmy Dykes Picks Cleveland As Flag Winners

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox, predicted tonight that the Cleveland Indians will win the 1941 American league baseball pennant.

The number two team will be the New York Yankees, said Dykes as he left for Chicago, where he will stop for a day or two before continuing on to Pasadena, Calif., and as for Détroit's defending champions—

"The Tigers will do good to stay in third place back of the Yankees," Dykes declared, "especially if they lose Hank Greenberg by June."

Dykes picked Boston for fourth place, his own White Sox for fifth, followed by St. Louis, Washington and Philadelphia.

Ray Donels Named To Head Coach Post At Iowa State

By the United Press

Ames, Iowa, Jan. 26.—Ray Donels, Iowa State College freshman football coach, was named head coach today after the athletic council accepted the resignation of Jim Yeager.

Yeager signed a three-year contract yesterday as head coach at the University of Colorado for $5,000 annually.

The council did not announce the term of Donel's contract or the amount of his salary.

Donels was graduated from Iowa State College in 1929. He coached at Union, Iowa, Colo., Iowa, and Ames high schools before he was hired as freshman coach in 1938.

Washington Eagles Triumph Over New York Rovers, 2 to 1

12,813 See Locals Win In Garden

Washington Six Scores Both Goals In First Period; Burns Scoreless

By Jack Munhall
Post Staff Writer

Madison Square Garden, New York, Jan. 26.—Relentlessly pursuing their first Eastern Amateur Hockey title the Washington Eagles rebounded from last night's streak-interrupting tie with the Seagulls to outpoint the New York Rovers today at Madison Square Garden, 2-1.

Before a paying audience of 12,813 fans, who lent comic relief to a bitterly fought match with organized chants complaining about the officiating, Washington captured its ninth victory in ten games, a league record for the season.

A rugged defense, featuring Goalie Gordie Hemming enabled Washington to shade the much improved cellar dwellers who were the aggressors most of the match. The Eagles scored single goals in the first and second periods, while New York counted in the second stanza. Each goal was tallied while the defensive team was one player shy.

Burns Scoreless

The match produced nothing but trouble for Norm Burns, Washington's ace center. Held scoreless for the first match in more than a month, Norm was deprived of a goal by a rare ruling, and to heap more misery upon him, some Rover opened a three-stitch gash under his right eye in the third period.

The opening period packed into 20 minutes most of the action and thrills seen in an entire ordinary game as the Eagles capitalized on penalties to spring into a 2-0 lead.

The pace was swift and the ice was littered with bodies, the result of vicious body-checking and also some illegal whacks which sent three Rovers and two Eagles into the meanie box for minor sentences.

Washington rapped in its first goal in the second minute of play against a Rovers' defense weakened by a tripping penalty to Hamilton. Dewey, shaking off a prolonged slump, was credited with the point on a fast shot from a difficult angle in the right lane. Assisting him on the play was Courteau, ever-improving team performer.

There was then no more scoring through almost 15 minutes of hectic hockey until Mailley was given a goal on a much-disputed play in which Burns, the league's leading scorer, had unfortunate luck. Burns set up the goal with a great individual offensive play but the puck failed by inches of crossing the last red line. Inadvertently, Goalie Cosby, of New York, pushed in the disc, and Mailley, nearest Washington player to the nets, was therefore credited with the goal.

Burns, who wasn't even given an assist on the play, had crashed through both New York defense men, Hamilton and Brownridge, and shot even as he was crashed to the ice from right angles to the goal.

Penalty Decisive

Penalties continued in the second period to wield a decisive power in the match and the Rovers took advantage of one to reduce Washington's lead to 2-1.

The New York tally, coming at 1:30, on a shot by Kreller on a double pass from Tilson and Hamilton, was the prelude to another long scoreless spell during which fine defensive work was featured. At the time Washington's Dewey was serving a two-minute sentence.

The Rovers, playing aggressively and smartly, took the offensive at the outset and held it until the final five minutes, when Washington narrowly missed several goals. Goalie Hemming sparkled in the nets for the Eagles, contributing several near-miraculous stops, likewise Goalie Crosby was a tower of strength for the Rovers.

Despite using four and even five men on attack, the Rovers were unable to tie the score in the final period. The Eagles were strictly on

Two Newcomers Mark Tonight's Fight Card

Menendez will introduce two newcomers to District fans tonight—Yussell Goldstein and Joe Boscerino, but he probably will nominate Gene Buffalo, colored Philadelphian who fights Boscerino, for the Furr assignment.

Goldstein, who's now advertised as a reformed clown, comes to town highly recommended by New York's club fight circles. He'll take on Wild Bill McDowell, Bendix, N. J., airplane plant worker, in what amounts to the night's feature eight-rounder.

If Goldstein lives up to his clippings and makes a good showing against McDowell, who has defeated Furr twice here, Menendez will launch an attempt to put him in with Georgie Abrams early next month.

Goldstein has a quaint background in the fight business. Yussell was brought into the boxing ring primarily to be a clown. His peculiar fighting style was a source of delight to the habitues of New York's small gymnasiums, but of a sudden Yussell blossomed out as a knockout artist. His record shows a string of a dozen or so knockouts over guys named Joe in New York in 1939, and in 1940 he was undefeated.

Boscerino, who hails from Brooklyn, is said to be a speedy fighter who uses a style faintly reminiscent of that of Furr.

Buffalo must defeat Boscerino to get a shot at Furr next week, and he'll be about a 6-5 favorite to do it—largely because he's better known in Washington. McDowell, whose most recent triumph here was a victory over Joey Spangler, also will be favored over Goldstein.

Johnny Yellovich, McDowell's stablemate, fights El Brookman, Washington middleweight, in a six-round preliminary. Buddy Holmes, Washington colored middleweight, meets Eddie Finnazzo, of Baltimore, in another six. Four-rounders, beginning at 8:30 p. m., trot out Carol Alexandar against Pee Wee Lewis and Roy Dunn against Jim Elliott.

Norm Burns Gets Cleveland Hockey Offer

By a Staff Correspondent

New York, Jan. 26.—Norm Burns, Washington Eagles center and leading scorer of the Eastern Amateur League, today is carrying in his pocket an unsigned contract to play with the Cleveland Barons, of the American League, this season after the Eagles' campaign is over.

Burns received the contract at Atlantic City last night from Al Sutphin, manager of the Barons, who has been negotiating with Burns for several months. According to Burns, Sutphin has offered him a contract to play with the Barons in the American League play-offs in March, and for the entire season of 1941-42.

Burns, who has an excellent chance to break two all-time Eastern Amateur scoring records, also has been approached by the New York Rangers and the Canadiens of the National League. The 195-pound Eagles' star, who joined the team this season after serving with Atlantic City and River Vale last year, is running ahead of the Eastern League marks for goals scored in one season, 53 held by Norman Calladine—and for total points in a season—101 established by Al Collings.

Asked if he would accept the Barons' offer, Burns said last night he wanted several days to think it over.

Latissimus Dorsi on the Hoof Tomorrow as Lifters Parade

Let's have no more shilly-shallying, fellow citizens. What this country needs is more development of the latissimus dorsi—to say nothing of the seratus magnus.

If you don't get what we mean, hop right out to the Jewish Community Center tomorrow night at 7 o'clock to the second annual District Amateur Athletic Union weight-lifting championships and you'll see latissimus dorsi in great abundance.

Braving all forms of heckling and chiding from the sidelines, they're going to stage a male beauty contest to pick "Mr. District of Columbia," and that's where the latissimus dorsi comes in—to say nothing of the seratus magnus.

The latissimus dorsi, literally translated, means "broad of the back," and it's a muscle in the back that few but weight-lifters ever develop.

Dulin Interviewed

No end anxious to get first-hand information on the latissimus dorsi situation, we dashed right out to the gymnasium of John D. Dulin, physical culture consultant, noveliso, veteran of 17 years of playing the violin, amateur photographer and chairman of the A. A. U. lifting committee.

"Whip off that sweat shirt," Dulin ordered a nearby lifter, Roger Johnson. "Did you ever see such development of the latissimus dorsi?"

We admitted we were stumped for a counterpart after a careful study of Mr. Johnston's back, and Dulin threw himself right into an oration on tomorrow night's beauty contest and weight-lifting in general.

The contest will be run much in the same manner of a beauty contest at any seaside resort. The glamour men of muscle will parade across the stage at the Center before the eyes of four judges, experts on anatomy.

Then they will return singly and be allowed two poses to better show off their bulging muscles.

Judging will be based on symmetry, bodily development and general appearance, Dulin said, and the winner will be given a trophy bearing his name and the title "Mr. District of Columbia, 1941."

A New York Idea

Dulin readily admits the whole idea came from the "Mr. America" contest staged in New York's Madison Square Garden last May at the national weight-lifting championships.

"Naturally, we expect to come in for a lot of kidding, but I think this will do a lot for the good for the sport," Dulin said.

Several of the lifters object to Dulin's calling the contest a male beauty contest, but he's steadfast in believing the resultant publicity will bring the lifting sport out of obscurity.

"It's a curious thing about weight-lifting, how little known it is here," Dulin said. "It's known in 52 countries, and in Egypt it's a national sport.

Dulin's gymnasium is practically a post-graduate course in anatomy, and the lifters themselves toss out technical phrases faster than a medical student.

Dulin is certain his gym has a winner in Johnston, who was seventeenth in the New York contest last year.

"Take a look at that seratus magnus," Dulin said, pointing to Johnston. The seratus magnus, it develops, is a chest muscle that helps give the torso a statuesque appearance.

Dulin is convinced that weight lifting is one of the most health-giving sports in existence. In fact, he fought his way back to his feet after being crushed in an elevator accident eight years ago by taking up the barbell habit while still in a wheel chair. His dream is to see weight-lifting on a large scale in Washington and ultimately adopted as a national sport—just as in Egypt.

Regal Soccer Team Enters League Finals

Regal Clothiers advanced to the finals of the Washington and Suburban Soccer League yesterday as they downed Maryland Park, 2 to 0, on the snowswept Gonzaga Field. Next Sunday the winners will meet Marlboro in a title game.

Cooksey and S. Gunton provided the scoring, the first goal coming early in the contest and the second in the latter part of the second half. The inclement weather did not deter the players as one of the best soccer exhibitions of the season took place.

Cooksey's goal came after a free kick and a bad bounce over the goal tender's head for the initial marker. The other score came about by virtue of a hard shot by Botts which rebounded off Simond's numbed fingers and was kicked in by S. Gunton.

Louis in Top Form for Bout With Burman

By the United Press

Greenwood Lake, N. Y., Jan. 26.—A large contingent of fight experts came to this snow mantled camp in the Ramapo Mountains today to sing "Old Black Joe" and to stuff themselves with venison.

They knocked off the venison all right, but they didn't yodel "Old Black Joe" because they discovered a surprisingly young Joe in the person of Bomber Louis, world heavyweight champion.

Louis, training for his thirteenth title defense against Red Burman at Madison Square Garden Friday night, hammered out an emphatic denial to reports that he has become an "old man" of the ring like Henry Armstrong—that he has slipped badly.

'Experts' Confounded

Some of the experts had their stories virtually written when they trooped into the jammed gymnasium at Joe Murchio's resort, beside the frozen lake where people were fishing through the ice for pickerel, bass and perch. They had seen the Brown Bomber in his last ring appearance at Boston on December 16, when he made an unimpressive showing against mediocre Al McCoy. They were geared for end-of-the-trail stuff today.

But the big Detroit Negro crossed them up.

Louis looked better this afternoon in four rounds with four sparmates than at any time before in his career. That was the consensus of ringsiders who included Promoter Mike Jacobs and Eddie Mead, manager of recently retired Henry Armstrong.

Shuffling Joe took on his four mates in rapid succession: James J. Johnson, Abner Powell, Joe O'Gatty and George Nicholson. Powell absorbed the most punishment and was floored with a hard right to the temple. Louis was fast, alert and punching with explosive snap and deadly accuracy. He looked like the magnificent fighting machine that massacred Schmeling, rather than the Boston Louis. There wasn't a sign of flabbiness, on his statuesque brown body.

Joe's Slipping—Upward

Trainer Jack Blackburn was grinning like a proud mother.

"If Chappie's slippin', it mus, be upwards, cuz he's a bettah fightah now than ah eveh seen him," he said.

Blackburn emphasized that Joe has grown nearly an inch in the past year, but he has put on virtually no extra weight, although approaching 27. He scaled 204 pounds today and will register about 203 for the fight. This will be the heaviest he has weighed for a title bout, because it's difficult to pare off avoirdupois in the winter. He'll be down to 201 for Billy Conn in June.

"Chappie ain't gettin' a bit fat," Blackburn concluded. "Why—way back in 1936 he wuz two hunnert an' five poun's foah Natie Brown. No suh; He's matoorin' puffectly."

Cochran Suffers Defeat In Cue Tourney

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 26.—The veteran Tiff Denton of Kansas City tonight upset Welker Cochran's hopes of going into a four-way tie for first place in the world's three cushion billiard tournament by defeating the San Francisco cue artist, 50 to 44, in 48 innings.

The two appeared on a benefit program for Johnny Layton, seven times three cushion champion of Sedalia, Mo. Layton was to have played in the $20,000 tournament, but was severely injured in a traffic accident. He has been in a hospital for the last six weeks.

Willie Hoppe, New York, who will play his first tournament match Tuesday night, participated in the Layton benefit. He made a few trick shots. Hoppe left the hospital recently after recovering from influenza and pneumonia. He is the defending champion.

Tonight's defeat dropped Cochran into a tie with Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, for second place in the standings with five victories and one defeat. Denton has won four games and lost three.

Paul Lewin posted his fifth victory, defeating his fellow Chicagoan, Len Kenney, 50 to 30, in 44 innings.

Lewin rolled up a 24-to-12 lead in the first 15 frames and was never headed thereafter, his high run of six coming in the second inning. He has lost six matches. Kenney has won only one of 12 starts.

John Fitzpatrick, of Los Angeles, outlasted Joe Moriarty, Chicago, 50 to 30, in 56 innings.

The lanky Californian started slowly, but managed to pile up 20 points in the first 21 frames while Moriarty was clicking only six billiards. Each had a high of four.

Fitzpatrick has broken even in eight matches and Moriarty has dropped nine of 11 starts.

Blackhawks Triumph

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks maintained their supremacy over the New York Rangers tonight, defeating the Stanley Cup champions, 4 to 1, before 16,608 spectators in the stadium.

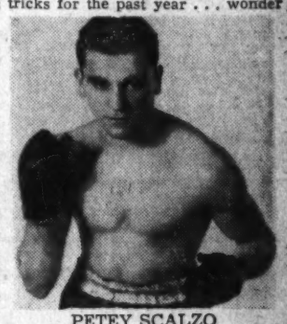
Scalzo Sought for Archibald-Jeffra Winner; Boxing Body Gets Slice of Fight Pass 'Fees'

The forthcoming Harry Jeffra-Joey Archibald fight for the Maryland-New York-California version of the featherweight championship may be the key to the whole muddle in the 127-pound class . . . contracts offering Petey Scalzo, National Boxing Association champion, a fight with the winner have been sent to Pete Reilly by Promoter Joe Turner and Gabe Menendez . . . there's a hitch, though—they've also offered him a fight in the new Uline arena with Chalky Wright, New York's No. 1 contender . . . Scalzo's cagey manager has made no reply to either offer.

PROMOTER TURNER

Those fight fans who go to Turner-promoted shows "on the house" and wonder what becomes of that 60 cent service charge on their passes might be interested in these figures . . . 20 cents is for Federal tax. 20 cents is for the District Boxing Commission, 10 cents goes to the Injured Boxers Relief Fund and the remaining dime is Turner's charge for "handling" . . . we don't recall any clause in the boxing laws giving the commission a right to take a cut on the passes handed out . . . Joe figures the "deadheads" average about 200 per fight, says he loses money on passes in the summer because of the cost of handling chairs in Griffith Stadium.

Chris Dundee has taken over the managerial reins of Art Lind, the young Minnesota Swedish protege of Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin . . . Chris thinks he has another Overlin . . . Ken's been teaching the 22-year-old former gob all his tricks for the past year . . . wonder how Sid Fishell feels now . . . he's the lad who gave Dundee the contract of Georgie Abrams free gratis some time ago in the belief Georgie was washed up . . . now Georgie's on the way to becoming middleweight champion, N. B. A. version . . . if Dundee can maneuver Tony Zale into position . . . which brings up the subject that Ray Alvis is having little success in trying to make the Zale-Abrams match for Uline's Arena or Griffith Stadium in March . . . Abrams fights Buffalo's Jimmy Clark Thursday night in Baltimore at the Coliseum . . . Clark's the young Negro who holds a one-round knockout over Zale. Doc Morris, who's been assigned to do Red Burman's publicity build-up, says the Baltimore lad will murder Joe Louis with body punishment when they meet for the title Friday night in Madison Square Garden . . . Doc has a dossier of the most famous boners of all time pulled by the "experts," the newspaper sports writers . . . Louis is the only heavyweight champion ever to defend his title in January . . . his only previous January defense was a one-round knockout of John Henry Lewis on January 23, 1939 . . . bad omen for Burman?



PETEY SCALZO

Our nomination for the coming sensation of college boxing is Leo Houck, jr., son of Penn State's great coach . . . Houck, a 175 pounder, is just a sophomore . . . He looks like a natural . . . Billy Richards, the Washington boy who captained the 1936 football team at Roosevelt and the 1938 team at Devitt Prep, made his debut as a boxer for Penn State Saturday night against Western Maryland . . . he knocked his man out . . . Billy fights in the 155-pound class . . . we're willing to give odds that Catholic University's boxing team will go on to another undefeated season under Coach Eddie LaFond this year.

Boxing Body Gives Alvis Hearing Today

The District Boxing Commission today will hold a hearing on the application of Ray Alvis for the rights to stage a boxing match February 11 in the new Uline's Ice Arena.

Alvis, whose two ventures at promotion under the wing of S. G. Leoffler at Riverside were financial duds, is expected to post $2,000 bond with the commission today as required before a promoter's license will be issued. The hearing will be at 2 p. m. in commission offices.

Reports last night stated that he planned to withdraw his application for the February 11 date—which falls a week in advance of rival Promoter Joe Turner's Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra featherweight title fight—but Alvis discounted such talk.

It is understood that the Boxing Commission will seek to draw Alvis out today on just what his fight plans for the future are.

Although no names were mentioned, it was generally believed that Alvis was the person Thomas P. Morgan, jr., newest member of the commission, had in mind when he last week attacked promoters who are "i.. the fight game one day and out the next."

Alvis' plans for February 11 were to put on a fight show featuring Georgie Abrams and Louis Kid Cocoa in the top spot in a 12-rounder. His application, in addition to naming this fight, included three eight-rounders between Harry Hurst and Everett Rightmire, Billy Banks and Marcus Pitts, and Chalky Wright and an opponent yet to be selected. It was understood last night, however, that the Abrams-Cocoa bout is off.

Henry Armstrong Undergoes Another 'Eye' Operation

By the Associated Press

Greenwood Lake, N. Y., Jan. 26. Henry Armstrong, former welterweight champion who recently failed to regain the title from Fritzie Zivic, has undergone another operation for the removal of scar tissue about his eyes, it was learned today. Dr. Alexander Schiff, of New York, performed the operation yesterday. Before the Zivic fight Armstrong had a considerable amount of scar tissue removed.

After recovering from the operation, Armstrong plans to join an orchestra for a cross-country tour.

Saranac Duo Wins Bobsled Race at Placid

By the Associated Press

Lake Placid, N. Y., Jan. 26.—National and North American Champion Tuffield Latour and his brakeman, Paul Duprey, narrowly bettered a pair of youngsters today to win the Adirondack Association A. A. U. Senior Two-Man Bobsled title.

The Saranac Lake Duo, topping an 11-team field, was timed in 4 minutes, 59.22 seconds for the four heats on the one-mile Mount Van Hoevenberg slide, just .11 of a second ahead of young Bud Washbond and Adrian Aubin, of Keene Valley.

Washbond, 16-year-old son of Bob Washbond, 1936 Olympic titleholder with Ivan Brown, was entered in his first major race, and might have emerged victorious, but for a skid on his last run at Little "S" Curve.

Entering the final heat, Washbond held a .39 of a second lead over Latour by virtue of a 1:14.10 third attempt, fastest single heat of the day.

Charles Keough and Jim Bickford, of Saranac Lake, captured third place, while the veteran Curtis Stevens and Bill D'Amico, of Lake Placid, finished fourth.

New Outfielder Signs With Pirates

Pittsburgh, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates announced today the signing of 24-year-old Edward Perry Stewart, of Los Angeles, an outfielder obtained in the draft last fall from the San Diego, Calif., club of the Pacific Coast League.

In 179 games for San Diego last season, Stewart made 231 hits, including 32 doubles, 12 triples and six home runs, for an average of .320. Well fortified with three good right-hand hitters in the outfield of Vince DiMaggio, Bob Elliott and Maurice Van Robays, Manager Frankie Frisch of the Pirates acquired Stewart to add some left-hand batting power to his fly-chasing department.

New Ski Champion

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo:

Key West, Fla.

Dear Boss:

I guess you will have to change the heading on these letters to read, "Haight Goes South of South." As you probably have seen by the postmark, I'm down here visiting the Key West natives—the original Dead End Kids. A guy can't get any lower and remain in the old U. S. A., according to the map, but I'm darn glad I still have one foot in it. As I sit here in the window of the La Concha Hotel (interspring cushions on all bar chairs) I'm mighty glad to report that I can see a group of formidable United States destroyers, and not Winchell, guarding this part of the country.

HAIGHT

I guess you wonder how come I suddenly turned tourist. Why I lived in Washington all my life and was only in the top of the Monument once and that was when I had a black eye and played hookey from school. The last time I was in the United States Capitol was when war was declared in 1917 and that was because I served maps for the Weather Bureau and the Capitol was on my route. I remember once my Aunt Gussie came on from Idaho and I took her down to Seventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue to show her the Center Marked and I found out the darn thing had been torn down ten years before. Whenever I want to know the name of a building in Washington, I wait for my cousin to come down from Elizabeth, N. J., and I let him take me around.

As you probably know I can be talked into anything. Didn't I let that sweet-tooth candy woman sell me 2 pounds of chocolate-coated Brazil nuts when I went on a diet the night before I left town? Well, I have been pestered by a guy about taking a ride to Key West. Actually, I saw him more often than pink elephants. Every time he met me for a week he talked about "the enchanting island city" and "speeding over a necklace of coral islands" and "a bit of old Spain of yesteryear." What a salesman! Why this guy could sell yesterday's paper to our telegraph editor. He really got me snowed under right in Miami. I staved him off as long as I could but he finally got me off guard. He took me to a place where they serve Super Zombies (only one to three customers, please) and I drank four and the first thing I knew I was on my way to Key West. They say this is one of the most picturesque rides in America—from Miami to Key West. But to tell the truth, Boss, I didn't see hardly a thing on the way down. This friend of mine put the speedometer up to 95 miles per hour and the way he drove you would have thought

Tarheels Lead In Conference Court Race

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26.—North Carolina's defending champions, well out in front of the Southern Conference basketball race with five loop triumphs in as many tries, meet Wake Forest and Virginia Tech in headliners on this week's circuit card of 13 games.

South Carolina with three victories and Richmond with two were idle last week. Washington and Lee's Generals advanced to fourth place in the standing by whipping Virginia Tech, 37-30, last night. The Lexington club has downed four family foes but dropped one decision to North Carolina.

Duke, William and Mary and Wake Forest are deadlocked for the fifth spot with three wins each in four Conference games. North Carolina State went into the red last week by losing to North Carolina, 47-26, and to Wake Forest, 50-40, for two triumphs against three losses.

North Carolina also conquered Maryland last week, 55-36, but lost to the Navy at Annapolis, 42-34, the fourth setback of the season for the Tarheels at the hands of outside quints.

The North Carolina-Wake Forest game will be played Tuesday night at Wake Forest. Davidson plays at Furman on the same night.

The Citadel makes a three-game invasion of the Tarheel State to engaged Davidson, Wake Forest and North Carolina State, beginning Thursday.

South Carolina will risk its unblemished record at Furman on Thursday and Richmond returns to the conference battlefront against Maryland on Friday and V. M. I. on Saturday, both at home. Maryland, beaten six times by family rivals this season, moves on to Duke Saturday.

Imported Horses to Add International Flavor to Widener

Raphael II and Heliopolis Get Heavy Imposts For Florida Stake

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Miami, Fla., Jan. 26.—Events in this troubled world have changed the plans of many men in the last year and they also have changed the plans many men had made for their horses. For instance, at Hialeah Park there are perhaps a dozen equines which would be racing in Europe now were in not for the war. These horses, the majority of them, have names as long as a city block, but they have running ability and were the Challedons and the Whirlaways over on the other side of the pond before things went beserk.

These "war refugees" will add an international flavor to the $50,000 Widener here on March 1 such as it has never known. France, England as well as several South American countries are likely to be represented. Two of the outstanding "war babies" are Raphael II, a 4-year-old son of Rodosto and Philimela from France, and Heliopolis, a 5-year-old son of Hyperion and Drift from war-torn England.

Raphael II was purchased by Joseph E. Widener, builder of Hialeah Park, for 275,000 francs as a yearling in France. He raced the colt in that country as a 2-year-old and sent him here with several other Widener thoroughbreds in the early months of the war.

Purchased From Lord Derby

Heliopolis, the English invader, belongs to E. D. Shaffer and was purchased from Lord Derby, arriving in this country last August. It was Shaffer's original plan to send Heliopolis right to the Cold Stream stud for breeding purposes. However, he later decided to give the bay horse a year of racing.

The son of Hyperion brought with him to these shores as fine a record as any European horse with the possible exception of Papyrus, which went down to defeat before Zev at Belmont in 1923. Raphael II won four stakes in England, three in a row and was in the money in several others.

Raphael II started his United States campaign auspiciously, winning an overnight race at Delaware Park. He moved over to Arlington Park to taste defeat in a purse event, to finish second to Robert L., but he came back to win two purse events in a row before the end of the 1940 campaign.

Back in his native France, Raphael II had a record more impressive than that in America. The fine-looking bay faced the barrier five times, winning twice, second once and unplaced once.

Loses by Nose

The Widener colorbearer made his first winning appearance at Le Tremblay in July and he followed that effort with another glorious victory in the Prix de la Jette, a 6-furlong battle at Deauville. They say an over-confident ride caused him to lose by a scant nose in the Poule des Yearlings Stake at Deauville in his next outing. He came back at the same track in another stake and again, this time apparently with no excuses, he was downed by a nose. He was taken up for the year at this point of his career.

Racing Secretary Charles McLennan assigned 120 pounds to Raphael II and 123 pounds to the older Heliopolis, so it may be seen that the two war refugees are highly respected performers.

Just what they can do in a field that includes Bimelech, Shot Put, Hash and possibly Whirlaway remains to be seen.

Getting back to Raphael II, he is a grandson of Epinard. His sire, Rhodosto, raced in the colors of Princess de Faucigny-Lucingo and triumphed in the Two Thousand Guineas, a 1-mile test, at newmarket, England. The stake that year was worth $45,187. Rhodosto finished in front of King Solomon and Gino. The late Willis Sharpe Kilmer brought Gino to this country for breeding purposes.

The dam of Raphael II, Philomela, was by Pharos, the well known English sire who finished second to Papyrus in the 1923 running of the English Derby.

Foreign-Breds Race Here

Raphael II, French-bred horse, who may start in the $50,000 Widener Handicap at Hialeah Park on March 1. Raphael II is owned by J. E. Widener.

Heliopolis, a fast horse from England, also nominated for the Widener Cup race. The equine "war refugee" is owned by E. D. Shaffer and and trained by Jack Howard.

Selections At Hialeah

Dear Al:

Last Saturday, Richard (Bones) Ingersoll, jockey agent for Lindberg and Lemmons, celebrated his birthday. Uncle Sam sent the Washington boy a greeting card telling him to report for Army duty. Edgar G. Horn, editor of the Turf and Sport Digest, made his annual awards. The presentation was as the result of the fifth annual poll of the Nation's racing writers. Warren Wright's Whirlaway, Crispin Oglesby's Level Best, Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech and W. L. Brann's Challedon were the leaders in their classes. Gustav Ring, Washington realtor, is here. He has 15 horses in training. Trainer P. Da Lee Watts got in from Hyattsville, Md., for a visit, and a little bird told me that Watts will be assigned to train the Ring horses in the near future. Clyde B. Asher, of Washington, and former owner of a modest stable, arrived for a short vacation. Remember Big Pebble? He's the one I played up last year when he ran second in the Widener. Well, I was looking out the window when he won last weekend. Wendell Eads loses his apprentice allowance in February. J. B. Partridge seems to have a lock and key on the Miami Beach Handicap. He won last year with Sandy Boot and this year with Robert L. Due to an error in mail delivery, Heather Broom's declaration was missing from the list when Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan announced the remaining eligibles for the $50,000 added Widener on March 1. Trainer Duval Headley produced an affidavit showing that the John Hay Whitney entry conformed to all conditions, the $100 additional subscription fee having been cleared in the regular manner. To W. B. Finnegan goes the honor of winning the major share of the $500 Miami Jockey Club prize award offered to the three leading trainers at Hialeah. Finnegan, who trains for Mrs. Edward L. Moore's Circle M Ranth, scored seven firsts, seven seconds and two thirds for a total of 44 points. This netted him $350 in prize money.

BILL.

First race—Miss Shopper is said to be a smart juvenile. She gets in light, thanks to the apprentice allowance and could be the right one in the day's hop, skip and jump. Remembering has been educated and will be ready for speed in this field. All Bells should get part of the money.

Second race—Our Florence turned in a good winning effort last out and appears ready to take these in camp. Meets only fillies and I see no reason for mistakes. Fantasma is a fair sort and promises to be close. Cherriko could awaken in company of this sort.

Third race—Sea Chanty has been knocking around and may prove the best of these maidens despite the 120-pound assignment. Tragic Ending is on the reserve list and will have to be dealt with if sent postward. One Tip for the minor award.

Fourth race—Michigan Flyer won a race over this course and probably is better than generally rated. I'm going to string along. Throttle Wide comes from a good barn and is dangerous. Yes and No has speed but may stop.

Fifth race—Curious Coin is going to crack down in a race at this track and I believe this would be the logical spot. Royal Robes is a good one and the stable refused to sell him at a good price. Dawn Attack for the show end.

Sixth race—High Fidelity made his move too late to be effective in that recent effort. With more intelligent handling, this one will get home. Gino Rex won that last and is a dangerous contender. Snow gets in with a feather and could surprise.

Seventh race—Count Morse seems the best suited of those gathered for this distance test. The veteran appears primed to handle opposition of this caliber. Histrionic will be ready for the best and is going to be close. Gourmet's last was excellent.

Eighth race—Orchids Next closed ground in that recent test and is ready for a good race. This could be the right spit. Granduce gets in light and should be prominent. Peanut Lady for the minor award.

Best bet—Count Morse.

Regals Score Over Typo Five, 47 to 38

Regal Clothiers basketball club captured its sixth consecutive game in the second half of the Heurich Amateur League yesterday by defeating the United Typewriter five, 47 to 38, on the Heurich gym floor, feature of a 3-game card.

Arky Viana and John Custer led the attack for the winners with 13 and 12 points, respectively. Mills and Mitchell were best for the losers with 8 points apiece.

Adam Hats took the measure of the Jewish Community Center club, 48 to 29, in another contest. In the third clash of the program, Delaware and Hudson subdued the Arlington Maccabees, 58 to 43.

ACKERMAN

Several of the marlin-fishing captains at Ocean City have licenses up to a hundred tons, but most of them work on the simple operator's permit which, in the past, was obtainable by writing to the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation.

Now a new law replaces the old 1910 Act, and operators of boats under 65 tons must go either to Norfolk or Baltimore for an examination. The new licenses are a step toward stricter regulation, and against the time when these boats, carrying passengers far offshore, will be required to have Diesel engines. Which is as it should be.

There has been some talk this winter of asking the Maryland Legislature to require licenses from all outside guide boats fishing out of Ocean City in the summer—another Florida proposition which has done more to slow up sport fishing there than any other one thing. We understand the idea has been given up.

There is under way at present, preparation of a display for the New York Sportsmen's Show next month. Gov. O'Conor is expected to attend so that he may present the trophies and buttons awarded for the many outstanding fish caught during the past season.

Shakespeare for the past several winters has undertaken out-of-the-ordinary fishing trips to the Bay of Florida; not for the actual fishing, but for the moving pictures of it, shown to clubs and sporting organizations throughout the year.

A letter from Capt. Somers Hickman, the Key West guide, who captained the expedition last year, tells us of this year's trip, which was in the same Shark River locality, and the odd sort of angling that doesn't fall to the lot of all anglers.

For alligators larger than three or four feet, they were just too much for the tackle. If the plug held, the line would give way. Which we can readily understand, for, back in the old days when 'gator hunting was profitable we can remember the tough going these hunters experienced when they hung on to a big one with their hands by shining them with a light and running up over them with a small skiff. So there is little wonder the 'gator usually beat the angler. They did however, get many feet of film packed with action and thrills. You will probably see them sometime during the coming year.

Barthòlomew Wins Senior Ice Speed Title

By International News Service

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 26.—Kenneth Bartholomew, of Minneapolis, today displaced Leo Freisinger, of Chicago, as senior men's champion at the annual national amateur outdoor ice speed skating championships.

After winning two second-place awards, Bartholomew gained the winning points for his title by placing first in the senior 5-mile race, with a time of 14 minutes 54.8 seconds.

Minneapolis also carried off the high team honors, with 760 points. Chicago was second with 590 points, followed by St. Paul, 130; Fitchburg, Mass., 120; Cleveland, 110; Milwaukee, 80, and La Crosse, 70. A total of 39 cities were represented.

Freisinger, who won both the national and North American titles last year, tied for second today with Charles Leighton, of Minneapolis, and Del Lamb, of Milwaukee. Each of the three had 60 points. Bartholomew's total was 100 points.

Carmelita Landry, of Fitchburg, Mass., who scored all of the 120 points which were enough to give that city fourth place in the team standings, won the senior women's championship. Louise Herou, of Minneapolis, was second with 80 points.

Other champions were Robert Fitzgerald, Minneapolis, 90 points, intermediate boys title winner; Don Laser, Chicago, 80 points, juvenile boys; Lloyd Lundeen, Minneapolis, and Glenn Chadima, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, tied among midget boys with 40 points apiece.

Trotting Body Adopts New Rules

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26 (AP)—A resolution requesting that the United States Trotting Association make mandatory the use of some form of overhead starting barrier was adopted unanimously by members of the Seventh district of the association here today.

The request, which also calls for a 15-second time limit on the starting of races, will be presented to the national board of directors of the organization in Detroit on March 10.

Joseph G. Neuwirth, of Myrtle Beach, S. C., was the sponsor of the motion and he declared that its enforcement would help to increase public interest in the sport.

Managoff-Boesch Rassle Thursday

Ivan Managoff, who has six straight victories at Turner's Arena, will meet Paul Boesch in a semi-windup match Thursday night at Turner's Arena.

Meeting in the feature bout will be The Green Hornet, mysterious masked wrestler, and master of the body bend, and Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain. Originally slated for the shot at The Hornet was Ernie Dusek, who, according to Promoter Joe Turner, took a "run-out" on the masked man.

Boesch has lost only one bout in 13—that to "Jeems" Londos. The Boesch-Managoff bout comes under the heading of scientific matches.

Hiser Five Routs Pincus Grill, 49-22

Hiser Theater basketball team routed the Pincus Grill five, 49 to 22, yesterday on the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School floor. The Hisers led, 29-8, at half-time. Horace Hershberger was high scorer for the winners with 11 points.

Wednesday night at 8 o'clock, Hiser will play the Taylor Stars on the Bethesda court.

Sacred Heart Wins, 23-2 Over St. James Five

Sacred Heart still retained its lead in the parochial league tournament when it handily defeated St. James by the score of 23-2. Horan scored both points for St. James via the foul line. St. Matthew, holding second place, was given a scare by the mighty mites of St. Stephens, who were nosed out by the score of 15-4. St. Joseph set back St. Thomas, 21-5. Holy Name dropped Holy Comfort from among the leaders by handing them their second defeat, 20-17. Blessed Sacrament overcame St. Michaels, 18-11. St. Martin defeated Immaculate Conception, 18-9 as St. Aloysius was idle.

In all, the prize money in the medal contention of the tourney was split 12-ways, Snead took $500; Wood, $350, and McSpaden and Nary $232.50 each. The fifth place tie at 139 among Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y.; Byron Nelson, of Toledo, Dodson, Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago and Jim Demaret, of Houston, Tex., was worth $125 each, while Emery Zimmerman, of Portland, Oreg.; John Bulla, of Chicago, and John Revolta, of Chicago, deadlocked for tenth with 140 and shared $50.

Dodson Bags Another $300.

In the low ball competition, Dodson picked up another $300 and Mangrum, who teamed with Nelson Hill, of Los Angeles, added $225 to his figure by finishing second with 130. Tied for third at 131 were McSpaden and E. E. Lowery, of San Francisco; Bulla and Weissmuller; Demaret and Pete Watts, of Hollywood; and Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa., and John Dawson, of Chicago. Each pro earned $118.75 for his work in this section of play.

Ed Oliver, the defending champion who led at the half way mark with a 66, blew up with a 75 when his putts refused to drop and finished far back among the 130 finalists.

Congressional Club And Greenkeepers In Meetings Today

Two golf meetings are scheduled for today—snowstorm and all—at the Congressional Club and the University of Maryland.

Congressional members will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the club to hear old and new officers tell us about the reorganization and ask questions of the membership.

Confronted by a snowstorm for the third straight year, greenkeepers from many Eastern and Middle Atlantic States will meet at Maryland University in the third annual short course. A record attendance is expected despite the snowfall.

Haight Discovers A Real Dead End

that somebody had told him there was a pot of gold at the end of the United States. To make matters worse, he kept pointing to the canals and ditches along the side of the road and every once in a while he would say, "There's one." I kept looking, but I didn't see anything at first. After about his fifteenth "There's one" I asked what he was talking about and he said turtles.

I began to watch more closely and finally we both saw the same thing. "There's one—a green turtle." I looked and it was a lizard. We kept on seeing them. He continued to swear they were turtles and I argued they were lizards. Finally, he started using one hand to point and the other to swing at me and you know that ain't a healthy way to act at 95 miles per hour. An orange truck came out from the side of the road and just missed us. I got on his neck for the way he was driving and he snapped, "Ain't I got the right of way?" And I came back with, "Yes and that entitles you to No. 1 post position in the operating room." (You know, Boss, always coming up with those quick retorts.) Well, that turtle vs. lizard went on. We were going so fast that I couldn't tell the Keys from the bridges. He kept yelling, "Turtles" and I'll admit I was getting to the point where I could only sit there and mutter "Lizards." Finally he slowed down to 40 and he says, "I'll bet 10 to 1 the next one is a turtle." Well, Boss, after you have seen 99 straight lizards wouldn't you bet the No. 100 would be a lizard?" So I ups and says, "O.K. give me five to win on lizard."

I was trying to figure 10 to 1 and your money back when he yells, "Look right there on the side of the bank. If that ain't a turtle the Redskins beat the Bears in the playoff." I looked, Boss, and sure enough it was a turtle. Why not only that, but the damn thing waggled his neck at me. I couldn't understand at first, but then it dawned on me. That was the same thing I had been seeing, but this guy had been driving so fast that they looked long and thin to me. We shook hands and joked the rest of the way into Key West. We went to dinner. I got up from the table to put a nickel in the record player, and that bum, that snake, that rat orders me a turtle steak.

Always your ace,

spree with about 10 minutes to play of the 20-minute period to put the first half score beyond reach of the college boys but when the half was up the lineup of former All-Americans could show only two more field goals than the Cardinals, who are still seeking their first college victory.

Goldfadden, Frankel and Rabin were outstanding for the Brewers in the opening period while Jimmy Mulvihill, the St. John's product; Captain Gene Daly and Brendan Stynes took honors for the Cardinals. Cotton had only seven players available.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School's Montgomery County championship club scored its second victory in a week over St. John's, 24-20, in a preliminary.

Coach Al Vogt's club led, 17-11, at halftime but stalled in the third and part of the fourth periods to allow the Johnnies to bring the score to 20-18, with four minutes to play.

Bob Cremins reentered the game at this point and clinched the verdict for the county club with a field goal and two successful foul shots within 60 seconds. Scoring honors were divided for both teams.

Swimming Officials Will Meet Tonight For Demonstration

A school for swimming officials will be instituted by the central Y. M. C. A. Swimming Club at its regular monthly meeting to be held tonight in room 102 of the G Street building.

A. Earle Weeks, president of the District of Columbia A. A. U., will lead a discussion of the duties of the various swimming officials. Immediately after this meeting he will direct a practical demonstration of judging the most controversial points in swimming, to be held in the men's pool. Members of the "Y" senior swimming team will assist in the demonstration.

Ice Hockey Was Never Like This

Meet Eric Waite, folks, he's a former Ontario ice hockey player, but he's an "Ice-Capet" now, or something. Anyway, we give you Eric doing an imitation of a gazelle in preparation for the opening of the Ice-Capades of 1941 tomorrow night in Uline's Ice Arena the defensive and drew catcalls for their stalling tactics. Burns was hurt with about three minutes remaining to play. Struck by a flying stick amid a scrimmage he fell to the ice by the sideboards, unnoticed for a few seconds until the crowd called the officials attention to him. Arising, Burns started in the direction of the dressing room, but collapsed and was carried away. On a last effort to salvage a tie the Rovers withdrew Goalie Cosby with 50 seconds left and inserted a third wing man, but once again Hemming saved Washington with a pair of timely saves.

Baltimore Snaps River Vale Streak

Baltimore, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Baltimore Orioles snapped a River Vale winning streak tonight, skating to a 4-2 victory in an Eastern Amateur League hockey match.

Mattson and McGregor brought River Vale from behind in the second period and the teams were even going into the final stanza but Riley scored for Baltimore within five minutes to break the deadlock. Ripley added to the margin two minutes later and the Oriole defense kept the victors under control for the remainder of the game.

Arena Nears Completion For Ice Show

Undeterred by yesterday's snow, work on the Uline-Ice-Arena neared completion in preparation for tomorrow night's gala double premier with the musical ice extravaganza, "Ice-Capades of 1941" making its first Washington appearance.

General Manager Raoul LeMat yesterday ridiculed reports the Arena would not be finished in time, stating that all contractors have confidently assured him all would be in complete readiness. LeMat added that the cement floor, base for the ice-surface, was complete and ready for the decorative paint job prior to the task of ice-making which will start today and is expected to be finished in time for a rehearsal late tomorrow afternoon.

Save for a few scattered exceptions, virtually every seat is in place and what few are not will be set up today. The north end of the building needs only windows set in to be entirely inclosed. The heating plant has already been functioning for the last several days and tests of the pipes which will carry the ammonia brine for freezing purposes and the by-pass, several days ago, proved entirely satisfactory.

The Ice-Capades, with its cast of 75, headlined by the famous Belita, blonde Britisher, concluded a successful week's stay at St. Louis Saturday night and will arrive at 7:50 a. m. this morning. Headquarters will be taken up at the Annapolis Hotel.

Despite yesterday's bad weather ticket sales continued to show marked increases. However, plenty of excellent seats remain and may be procured at UUline Ice Arena or at a special downtown ticket office, 1309 F Street Northwest. Phone reservations are being handled at Lincoln 8500 and Lincoln 2462.

Buckeye Five Ousted From Big Ten Lead

Auburn Continues As Southeastern's Top Club; Utah Leads in Big Seven

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 26.—As basketball schedules go, only a few games were played last week and they didn't go very far toward settling the various sectional and conference races.

Highlights were the ousting of Ohio State from the Big Ten leadership and the emergence of Auburn in the Southeastern Conference, Utah in the Big Seven and Washington in the northern division of the Pacific Coast Conference as undisputed leaders of their groups.

Dartmouth, Eastern League leader, and Arkansas in the Southwest held their places without action. North Carolina's defending champions of the Southern Conference added to their margin of leadership, although they took a 42-34 drubbing from Navy in an outside game Saturday, and Stanford improved its position in the Southern half of the coast loop. Kansas and Oklahoma continued their tie for the Big Six lead as Kansas State dropped out.

Exams Curtail Action

Leading "independent" teams also found that the profs were providing more opposition than other teams during the mid-winter examination period. In the East Seton Hall, Rhode Island State, Baltimore and Westminster (Pa.) remained undefeated. Long Island, Villanova, Georgetown, Washington and Jefferson, New York University, Loyola (Baltimore), Duquesne, Penn State and George Washington preserved their good ratings.

In the Mid-West Toledo, with twelve straight victories, remained the only unbeaten major team, with Notre Dame, De Paul of Chicago, Detroit and little Maryville (Mo.) Teachers also holding the limelight.

Business remains dull during the coming week. A couple of doubleheaders are listed in the East, however, with the high-scoring Rhode Island State team and Butler from the Mid-West playing St. Francis and Long Island, respectively, at New York Wednesday and Temple and St. Joseph at Philadelphia Friday.

The current status of the sectional races looks something like this:

EAST—With Dartmouth idle, Cornell strengthened its hold on second place in the Eastern league by whipping Yale, 45-27, after the Elis had dropped a midweek game to Pennsylvania, 40-35. Georgetown hung up its tenth successive victory Wednesday, 38-18, against Army, while Baltimore bowled over Blue Ridge, 63-31, for its ninth straight.

BIG TEN—Wisconsin, making a mighty comeback, whipped Ohio State, 46-31, Saturday to drop the Bucks from first place into a tie with Illinois for third. Idle Indiana went into the lead, while Wisconsin took second. The Badgers previously had routed Chicago. Michigan, after whipping Minnesota, lost to Northwestern, 45-34. It was the first conference victory for the Wildcats, who had lost to Iowa Monday.

BIG SIX—Kansas clouted Kansas State, 46-41, and Oklahoma routed Missouri, 49-32, to keep their race tied. Nebraska meanwhile bowled over Missouri and Iowa State, whose decline was the big surprise of the circuit, to take third place.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE—In conference competition, North Carolina stretched its unbeaten string to five with victories over North Carolina State and Maryland. South Carolina, with three victories, and Richmond with two, also are unbeaten in the circuit. Both were idle last week but will get into action during this week's 13-game program.

SOUTHEASTERN CONFERENCE—Auburn, now the only unbeaten Southeastern team, beat Tulane 45-41 and Vanderbilt 45-44 to take the lead. The Plainsmen have won seven straight games, four in conference competition. Georgia Tech, unbeaten leader a week ago, was dumped by Kentucky, then by Clemson of the Southern loop and finally Saturday by Tulane, 37-20. Florida, idle for two weeks, held second place against a strong threat from Tennessee, which bowled over Mississippi State and Georgia.

SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE—Arkansas, although idle, began to see visions of a conference title as Southern Methodist shoved Rice out of a threatening position and Texas A. and M. knocked off Baylor. S. M. U., with three victories and one loss, is second. Arkansas has won four straight and gets a big "break" from the schedule, which enables the Razorbacks to play their next four games against Rice and Baylor, where they are notoriously tough.

Gonzaga Bantams Win in Overtime

Gonzaga High School's Bantam team carried its second consecutive game into overtime and emerged victorious over Eastern Boys Club 120 pounders by the score of 30-26.

The Crows, who last week ran up the record-breaking score of 116 points, could not get started against a zone defense, and after getting off to a 7-point lead, saw it slowly dwindle until the Bantams tied them at 15-all and went into the lead 16-15 at the half.

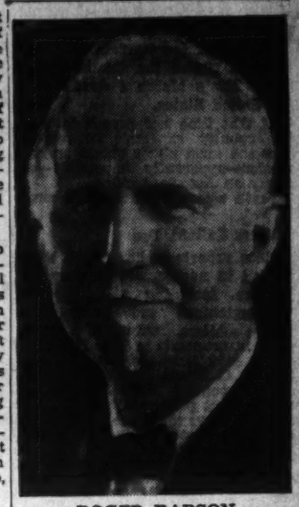
Eccles Plan Regarded a Setup

THE REQUEST of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve System, that the President's power to furhter devalue the dollar be scrapped was an Administration trial balloon. Causing considerable comment when first proposed, the real facts behind the controversy have not yet come out.



ROGER BABSON.

To anticipate that the President would voluntarily give up any of his personal powers must have made many die-hard Republicans believe once more in the "dawn of a new day." To think that Chairman Eccles, a noted "leftist," would of his own initiative bite the hand that gave him his job is likewise too much to believe. Not for nothing is this sudden about-face and passive acquiescence on the part of the President to a plant which would shear him of immense and hard-won power.

The boys in the back room who said, "It's just a game of politics"—were absolutely right. The proposal is too practically obvious; it shows the hand of the master politician too cleverly to warrant any other interpretation. It is essential that the President demonstrate as early as possible to the people of this country that he still has the upper hand with Congress. The last thing in the world he wants to do anyway is to further devalue the dollar. But will Congress now want to take back what was once taken from them? Perhaps Congress, too, will want to play a little politics.

Congress should repeal unsound legislation and regulations. Any act of Congress which will delay the inflation hazard is justified. Mr. Eccles' proposal is basically sound. Originating from the source it did, however, it is bound to be viewed with suspicion. This is particularly true in view of the terrific battle the President put up two years ago to retain his personal power to further devalue the dollar. Regardless of the ultimate fearsome results that the President's existing powers might bring about, Congress may feel it would lose face to now reverse itself.

The President, through Mr. Eccles, has passed the inflation ball to Congress. Our lawmakers have got to carry it for a while. My guess is that right now they are praying for a fumble. Certainly, there should be removed from our statute books many of the crazy ideas that original New Dealers had for the regimentation of our monetary system. The fact is that the schemes were never needed anyway. Someone in the Administration has waked up to the fact that the country is getting into a financial hotbox. Perhaps all that gold

Vera Hruba Gets Proposals From D.C. Men

If Vera Hruba, lovely Czecho-Slovakian figure skater and "woman without a country," gets kicked out of this one, it won't be the fault of the local boys.

Miss Hruba, statuesque blonde who defied Hitler's suggestion she skate "under the German flag" because "I prefer the Czecho-Slovakian," has a March 1 deadline in the United States.

At that time her permit to visit this country expires. To remain here she must either obtain an extension—apparently impossible—or marry an American citizen.

That's where the local boys come in.

Soldiers Gallant, Too

Since reports of her plight were carried in newspapers January 18, 25 men, including a half dozen Washingtonians and three Fort Myer soldiers, wrote and telegraphed proposals to Miss Hruba.

But, says Mme. Jaroslav Fluksa, of 1819 Q Street Northwest, niece of the comely skater, "Vera is tough about proposals."

"She always shaid she would have to be very much in love before she could marry."

"And money doesn't mean a thing," added Mme. Fluksa, wife of the chancellor of the defunct Czech Embassy here. "She's just looking for a good boy."

The former diplomat's wife indicated, however, that Miss Hruba would as soon settle here as any other American city she had seen since her arrival here just before her country was over-run. Shortly after, this was impressed on Miss Hruba when she was halted at the border on a trip to Canada because she was a "woman with a country."

Mrs. Fluksa said she would notify Vera, now skating in Kansas City, of the District offers. Not yet is the District out of the running for the blond skater's affection, she indicated.

Meanwhile, the press agent for the Ice-Capades, which opens here shortly, assures us that this is not a publicity stunt.

Girl's Strip-Tease Causes Matador To Blush Unseen

Mexico City, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—The American art of the strip-tease—with a patriotic motif—was combined with the ancient sport of bull-fighting here today to the cheers of 20,000 fans.

While matador Carlos Arruza was receiving an ovation for killing his fifth bull, a beautiful unidentified American girl rushed to the edge of the ring from a seat in the seventh row and peeled off in rapid succession three pairs of bloomers, colored red, white and blue, which she tossed to Arruza as a token of her admiration.

The fight throng forgot about the matador and began to cheer her. The crowd objected strenuously when police tried to take her out and she returned to her seat.

Bethesda Baptists Open First Unit Of Church Project

They were Dr. W. O. Lewis, executive secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, the headquarters of which are temporarily here, removed from London; Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention; George B. Fraser, of Chevy Chase Baptist Church and president of the convention, and Dr. John Watts, general secretary of the Maryland Baptist Union Association.

Dr. Weaver, speaking in the afternoon, reminded the congregation that the Baptists of the world had long fought not only for religious liberty for themselves but for all people.

Greetings were brought by Dr. Lewis Fraser, the Rev. J. Raymond Nelson, pastor of the church, and John J. H. Pool, one of its trustees. Dr. Watts addressed the morning program.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

Now a lot of fellows are going down to Washington and telling Congress what they think of the war. It seems to me that a committee is a lot of firemen who left their hats home.

The fellows who seem to know the most are the maiden aunts who never had a war of their own. They have a lot of ideas and they are busier than the linesmen in that famous 73-0 football game.

When a fellow gets up in meeting he has some definite leanings either way and he will favor one side like a bear with a sore paw.

Nobody would be human if they didn't have sympathies and that's why they discourage political arguments in barrooms. A famous hotel manager told me: "The best bartender I ever had didn't know who won the last election."

The most you can get out of a cross-examination is a personal opinion. If you don't think this is a queer age we are living in how can you discount the fact that the makers of toy electric trains made more money in 1940 than the big railroads?

The best work ever done by a committee was when a midget climbed on J. P. Morgan's knee and they all sang "Sonny Boy," which is an ASCAP tune and non-negotiable.

From now on, I suggest three-man committees. That will give 'em the opportunity of looking up a fourth hand for bridge.

U. S. Transport Halted By St. Johns Snowstorm

St. Johns, Newfoundland, Jan. 26 (AP).—The United States transport Edmond B. Alexander, bearing troops to man the United States defense base here, was held in Conception Bay over the weekend by a snowstorm that made it impossible for her to enter this narrow-necked harbor.

The liner approached St. Johns yesterday, but it was considered inadvisable to take her in until the weather cleared.

The names of all of the general partners interested in said firm are James M. Johnston, a resident of the State of Maryland; James H. Lemon, a resident of Washington, District of Columbia; Bernard J. Nees, a resident of the State of Maryland, and Harvey B. Gram, jr., a resident of Washington, District of Columbia; and the name of the special partner is Scott B. Appleby, a resident of Nassau, N. W. I. The amount of capital which said special partner has contributed is Sixty Thousand Dollars ($60,000.00); the remainder of the total capital of One Hundred Thirty-five Thousand Dollars ($135,000.00) has been contributed by James M. Johnston. This partnership is to commence on the 15th day of January, 1941, and shall terminate five years from the date of these presents, unless sooner dissolved by mutual consent of the partners, their legal representatives or assigns. Certificate of Limited Partnership was filed by us January 15, 1941, in the Office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia as required by law.

"FIRST IN FRIENDLINESS"

AETNA'S NEW LOAN PLAN!

The AETNA FINANCE CO., a National Institution, announces the opening of its two new offices conveniently located to serve you best. Aetna's policy of liberal credit requirements, together with fast, confidential service, has made thousands of friends over the past 20 years.

Emergency Loans $5 to $50

A new plan, timely as the National Defense Program. Money for most any emergency when you need cash in a hurry. Just your own signature required. It's easy to qualify.

Signature Loans $10 to $300

Our only requirement is that you are working steadily. No co-signers necessary. Just sign your name and get the cash you need quickly—without red tape. You can arrange a loan by phone. Simply call our office nearest you. We'll take your application, and you can pick up your money at your own convenience.

Auto Loans $10 to $300

On most any make or model car. Wife's signature or cosigners not necessary. If your payments are too high, we can cut them as much as one-half—and advance more cash immediately. 15-minute service.

If your car isn't paid for, you can get a SECOND loan without refinancing or extra charges. Save money at AETNA.

Listen! with Glynn

A couple of Federal employes are going to get a week's free trip to St. Petersburg, Florida, as a result of the contest sponsored by WJSV and the Federal Employees Council.

The fortunate winners will be given their transportation aboard the "Silver Meteor," the Seaboard Railway's streamliner their housing at the fashionable Hotel Huntington, and their entertainment by all the civic and social organizations of St. Petersburg. They'll have access as guests to all St. Petersburg's best golf courses and yacht and beach clubs.

And to get all this, without a cent of expense, all they have to do is write a brief letter, or a postcard even, to the F. E. C., in care of WJSV, telling what recreational activity or hobby they go in for after office hours and what, in their opinion, the Federal Employees Council can do to further recreational activities for Government employes.

There is no limit to the number of entries that can be made as long as they are on separate letters or postcards. And any Government employe can enter the thing except representatives of the F. E. C. or their families. The entries, which close at midnight, February 16, are to be judged primarily on their practical contributions to recreation and welfare and secondly on their conciseness and excellence of expression.

You can hear more about it on the program "Your Government This Week" over WJSV at 7:15 next Saturday. Sounds like a nice, simple way to get a Florida vacation.

Beaverbrook Cuts Red Tape, Gets Planes

(Editor's note: A key figure in Britain's war effort is Lord Beaverbrook, who is minister for aircraft production. He is a round, small man, but he is getting big results. Here's the first of a series of three stories on this amazing man who has turned into success almost everything he has touched. In tomorrow's story Hugh Wagnon takes you on a day's visit with Beaverbrook.)

By Hugh Wagnon
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 26.—Peacetime Britain considered the expression "go-getter" as an Americanism and men who qualified for that description as upstarts who deserved scant consideration.

But today, wartime Britain is counting on go-getters to win the war, and the greatest of these is "the Busy B"—who, as all Britons know, is Lord Beaverbrook, the hustling, hard-driving minister for aircraft production.

That is why the man in the street applauded when Prime Minister Churchill countered a plane shortage last May by creating a new ministry and putting it into Beaverbrook's zealous hands.

"The Beaver gets things done," people said with satisfaction.

To millions long familiar with his name, Beaverbrook was the Canadian-born William Maxwell Aitken—who amassed $5,000,000 in cement, timber, banking and electricity before he was 30, then came to Britain and became a great figure in politics, newspaper publisher, author and empire builder.

Always Successful

Everything to which he devoted his interest succeeded phenomenally, a longtime associate said, "because he worked unbelievably hard and directed his vast energy with swift, sure judgment."

To the nation he has become known as a minister who appropriates men, ideas and materials from whatever source available—including older and more sedate and somewhat bewildered ministries—in his unswerving drive to bring Britain's output of warplanes, with American help, to superiority over Axis capacity.

The way he dived into his task may be judged by Churchill's statement last August 20:

"The splendid—nay, astounding—increase in the output and repair of British aircraft and engines, which Lord Beaverbrook has achieved by a genius of organization and drive which looks like magic, has given us overflowing reserves of every type of aircraft and an ever-mounting stream of production, both in quantity and quality.

"The enemy is, of course, far more numerous than we are. But our new production already, I am advised, exceeds his largely, and American production is only just beginning to flow in."

To Beaverbrook's friends, this "drive which looks like magic" was no surprise. They were certain that if there were any man in the empire who could outdo Germany's Goering, it was Beaverbrook—unorthodox, brilliant, hard but human, a man to get results.

He Got His Man

He won the admiration of Churchill during the World War, and when Churchill took command last May, the first thing he did was to telephone the Canadian to take the new ministry mothered by the same urgent necessity that brought Lloyd George into the World War cabinet as minister of munitions after an amazing disclosure of a shell shortage.

Beaverbrook's asthma troubled him, and he demurred that better and younger men were available.

But 66-year-old Churchill would not take "no" for an answer from his 61-year-old friend, and telephoned every two hours for a day and night and the next day until Beaverbrook accepted.

Slow to take the job, Beaverbrook was swift to act once he was in.

The first day he called in the chief civil servants and others in charge of plane construction and listened to their plans. When they had finished, he said, "so in three months you can give me large deliveries of planes?"

They nodded.

"That's not good enough," he barked. "I want to know how many planes you can deliver tomorrow morning."

Merged 2 Factories

Three days later he announced a merger of two great aircraft factories, Nuffield and Vickers Supermarine, under one management.

Four days later he called upon all aircraft workers to forego their next two weekends and work on those Saturdays and Sundays.

"They are asked to work by night and by day, full overtime for the present," he said.

The workers responded willingly. They knew Britain was in a corner and that this was the way out.

In the only case on record of an aircraft worker who objected to a 7-day week, his mates threw the objector out of the factory and into the street.

So it went day after day, action and more action.

Civil servants were aghast at methods of the new ministry—a bedlam of jangling telephones, doors that never closed, disregard of the traditional weekend, the Beaver's sharp bark: "On your toes, man, on your toes!"

Beaverbrook is a great user of the telephone. He frequently has made spontaneous decisions while talking by phone and left no record of his action. To workers accustomed to observing all the niceties of government red tape and communicating always by written documents mailed or delivered by hand, this was something of a shock.

But it got the job done quicker, and the Beaver let his "comma-chasers" worry about keeping the record straight.

Set Record in June

A month after taking charge he was able to announce:

"Our aircraft production in the month of June was a record. In fact, we produced more than double the total of aircraft that were produced in the same month last year when preparations for war were going full blast. We also turned out far more than double the number of engines, thus increasing our surplus stocks."

Before Beaverbrook took charge, the job of making planes was in many hands, slowed by divided responsibilities and interminable quibbling over details by military experts, no two of whom seemed able to agree.

Beaverbrook took all authority and shared it jealously with men of his own choosing, men who knew their jobs and were willing to accept responsibility.

Former Kaiser, 82 Tomorrow, Follows With Maps the Marching Feet of Hitler's Legions

By Louis P. Lochner.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Doorn, The Netherlands, Jan. 26 (AP).—Wilhelm II, World War Emperor of Germany, will observe his eighty-second birthday tomorrow without a thought of leaving this haven to which he fled after abdicating more than 22 years ago.

"Old trees cannot be transplanted," the white-bearded ex-monarch is fond of saying.

His intimates say that if anything is certain in these uncertain times it is that the former Emperor has no thought of quitting Doorn. Every nook and corner of his Doorn estate, of the village and its surroundings, are familiar to him and he is serenely content to remain where he is.

He is hale and hearty and he takes deep interest in the war although it has affected him directly but little.

A huge map of Europe and Africa is spread on the table in his smoking room and during the war of movement last May and June he stuck little flags in the map each day to indicate progress of the fighting. He resumed this activity recently with the fighting in Greece, Albania and Africa.

Wilhelm's interest in naval affairs, always a pet subject with him, continues. His tabulation of vessels torpedoed or bomb-attacked during the present war is probably as complete as that of any private citizen. Every week an adjutant prepares a resume for him.

Routine life at Doorn has been affected only slightly by the war. The sole visible change is the presence of German, instead of Dutch, guards at the entrance to the estate.

All the same, the birthday observance tomorrow probably will be the most modest in his long and eventful life—because of the war.

Besides the Kaiserin Hermine, who shares his exile, only three near relatives were able to come over from Germany. They were his fourth son, Prince August Wilhelm (known as Auwi), his grandson Prince Franz Joseph (son of the Kaiser's late fifth son, Joachim) and Franz Joseph's newly-wed wife, Princess Henrietta (daughter of Hermine), who calls the aged ex-monarch "Vani," and never speaks of him as stepfather.

The only other out-of-town guest was Gen. Wilhelm Von Dommes, for many years chief administrator of Hohenzollern properties in Berlin.

Except for the fact that he won't take his customary turn at the wood-chopping block, the former Kaiser's birthday will, for the most part, be marked by the same regularity as have all the other days of his long exile.

The entire Doorn household, from the monarch to the charwoman, has been asked to assemble in the parlor at 9:30 a. m. for a ceremony of congratulations, followed by family devotions.

Sheaves of telegrams and letters awaited the birthday celebrant, but their number was small compared with the basketful he received in peace times. War and censorship limited the number this year.

The Kaiser seldom deviates from his daily routine, which is timed almost to the minute. He breakfasts at 8:45, chops or saws wood from 9:30 to 10:30 and then has tea. From 10:45 until 1 p. m. he attends to his correspondence and reads German and Dutch newspapers—the only ones at his disposal.

He lunches at 1 p. m. and then naps until about 3:30 p. m., after which he returns to his correspondence for a time. He has tea again at 4:45 p. m. then takes a walk on his estate or in the village and returns for a hot bath. Dinner is at 8 p. m., after which Welhelm, or some other member of the household, reads aloud while the Empress knits.

Lights go out at 10 p. m.

Coast Guard Awaits Details Of Sub Attack

Los Angeles, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Coast Guard said today it was taking "no further action" until receipt of more information regarding a radio message saying a submarine had "shelled unknown man," off the California coast.

The message indicated the position of the unidentified sending vessel was nearly 1,000 miles northwest of here in the Pacific. Coast Guard officials suggested the message might have been intended to read "shelled unknown man of war."

Capital Engineers Asked To Talk in Philadelphia

Three Washington electrical engineers and a United States Army Air Corps engineer have been selected to deliver technical papers before the mid-winter meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in Philadelphia opening today and in session till Friday.

The engineers are K. J. Plucknett and W. T. Smith, of the Rural Electrification Administration; Roland Whitehurst, of the Electrical Storage Battery Co., and T. B. Holliday, of the Air Corps.

D. C. Nurses to Talk Problems at Parley

"Problems Confronting Nurses in the District of Columbia" will be the topic of a panel discussion at the convention of the District of Columbia Graduate Nurses' Association and the League of Nursing Education at the Willard Hotel today and Tuesday. Featured also on the program will be a symposium on "Mental Hygiene."

The meetings will be held in the Willard Room and all registered nurses in the District are invited to attend.

Sen. Brown's Stolen Car Recovered in Virginia

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 26.—An automobile owned by Senator Prentiss A. Brown, of Michigan, stolen several days ago in Washington, was recovered yesterday on a private road leading from Route 1, about 15 miles north of this city in Stafford County. The car had been damaged slightly about the front.

Blood Plasma in Cans Ready To Be Used in War, Disaster

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Canned human blood that could be stored and shipped like ordinary tinned products to save war and disaster victims is ready for large-scale production.

As outlined by Dr. Max M. Strumia of Bryn Mawr Hospital, who developed the plan in cooperation with the American Red Cross and the National Research Council, the process would eliminate delays in locating donors for emergency transfusions.

Discussing the new life-saving technique, the 44-year-old pathologist said distilled water is added to dried blood plasma to make it ready for use.

Dr. Strumia was designated by the research council last fall to work out technical details of building up a national reservoir of dried blood to supply military and civil needs.

Preparations now are complete, he said, for mass production by a Philadelphia pharmaceutical firm.

Chapters of the American Red Cross throughout the East have arranged to accept blood from volunteer donors and ship it to Philadelphia.

Already the United States Navy has ordered 50,000 pints of the processed blood. A Red Cross official predicted the Army's order would be still larger.

Inquiries have come from foreign countries now at war, Dr. Strumia said, but their requests are being turned down for the present.
